LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Details, details, details.

It was the little details the "whole way along," said tomato grower Cliff Charles, that helped net him first place recognition for the highest yield in his class at the Pennsylvania Vegetable Conference in Hershey.

Charles was recognized with growers having the highest tomato yields in Pennsylvania.

But it wasn't any one management technique or growing method that enabled Charles to gain the recognition. Rather, a combination of close management, correct fertilizer and pesticide application rates, and watching the plants with a careful eye during the season that netted him the award.

Tomato crops

Charles farms a total of 400 acres, including 80 acres of tomatoes, 70 acres of beans and 250 acres of corn. Those who work on the farm include his wife, Nancy, and children Eric, 10; Phillip, 6; Darren, 3; Crystal, 11; Mark Char-

ALUM BANK (Bedford Co.)— Jr. Field Day was held at the Carl Yoder Farm with students in agricultural programs from Bedford, Northern Bedford, and Chestnut Ridge participating.

Programs for the day included student judging, a veterinarian presenting a program on mastitis, and program on feeding dairy cattle, and Susan Fox, extension county agent talked about the importance of ventilation in the dairy barn and how it affects the production of the dairy cows.

Winning the judging competition were David Brown, Chestnut Ridge, first in the senior division, and Troy Brown, Bedford, second in the senior division.

In the junior division, Jerry Beegle, Chestnut Ridge, was first, and Mike Draeger, Chestnut Ridge, second.

Troy Brown said he had done some judging previously. The boys said they looked for good udders and good udder support and good teat placement.

OPINION

Sales Persons For Agriculture

Farmers certainly have a right to know that the manufacturer of their farm truck has produced a safe vehicle for the family farm. And by the same logic, consumers have a right to know they are getting wholesome, nutritious, and safe food for their families, too.

Unfortunatily, many consumers and their representatives, such as urban news reporters and consumer advocates, know very little about good farming methods and about the contribution that agriculture makes to their high standard of living. So farmers need to be ready to tell their urban neighbors about their business whenever they have the opportunity.

Most farmers know the technical aspects of growing crops and breeding top producing cows. But they have never considered public relations as part of their job description. That is, informing the public about agriculture and what it provides. You need to become an ambassador for agriculture.

Public relations firms and advertising agencies hired by the checkoff dollars from the farmer's income help sell agriculture and food products. But as an individual farmer, you can talk to your neighbors. Or you can talk to the reporter from the town paper. We believe farmers are the best salespersons for agriculture.

NOW IS THE TIME

By Jay Irwin
Lancaster County
Agricultural Agent

To Bid Farewell--
A Time For A Change

Time has a way of creeping up on us, and I have passed my 65th birthday, so I'm taking that next step in life .... retirement. Effective May 1, I will be retiring as County Extension Director of Lancaster County Cooperative Extension. I have truly enjoyed my relationship with you through this column and have appreciated the many letters and comments that I've received. The column "Now Is The Time" will be continued under the able leadership of John H. Schwartz, the new County Extension Director.

If you are wondering what I will be doing, I guess I am not totally retiring because I have accepted a temporary duty assignment with U.S.D.A. Extension Service and Penn State's International Program to serve as an agriculture advisor on a team going to Poland from June 2 to November 29, 1991.

I have seen a lot of progress in Lancaster County Agriculture over the 24 years I've been here. Dairy cows have increased from 65,000 in 1967 to 97,000 in 1989 with production per cow going from 10,000 lbs/cow to 15,500 lbs/cow. Laying hens from 3,000,000 in 1967 to 9,000,000 in 1989 with production of 230 eggs/hen/year to 268 eggs/hen/year. Hogs have risen from 90,000 to 358,000. On the other hand, the number of farms has decreased from 6,000 to 5,000 and crop acreage from 330,000 acres to 300,000 acres in the same time period. These changes have taken place because of the efficient use of newer pesticides, better feeding programs, nutrient management of our soils and overall better farm management practices. Our farmers have steadily become much more efficient.

The consumer has greatly benefitted in these efficiencies because the percent of disposable income spent on food has been declining since 1950. In 1950 the people in the U.S. spent 22.2% of their disposable income on food; in 1960 they spent 20%; in 1975 they spent 17% and in 1990 they only spent 10% of their disposable income on food. This is a tremendous achievement for all of agriculture.

I also want to commend the supportive industries that are an integral part of this progress. The advanced technology in feed manufacturing and formulation have been a contributing factor in the increases in milk and egg production; the supportive banking industry has allowed farmers to purchase new technologies for their operations. And yes, I feel that our Penn State Cooperative Extension has been a contributing part of this progress through dedicated research and the commitment of Extension Agents to take that information to the farmers and general public.

Extension has changed and will continue to change in the future. Computers are a valuable tool in Extension and will be used more in the future to speed-up the decision making process. More emphasis will be placed on IPM (integrated pest management) in the future as we strive to reduce the need for pesticides. Land use and farmland preservation, along with environmental issues, will be major issues as we proceed into the next decade.

We must all approach the future with a good positive attitude because each one of us can make a difference. I truly wish each one of you the very best in your future.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS
BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

LEARNING TO MEND
May 5, 1991

Background Scripture: 2 Corinthians 1:12-2:17.

Devotional Reading: Philippians 4:4-13.

Back in the 19th century, a denomination (which shall remain nameless) was torn asunder by a conflict that was fought under the banner of the theological disagreement on the doctrine of "entire sanctification." Today church historians acknowledge that essentially this split was the result of a personal conflict between two bishops, Smith and Jones (not their real names) who refused to acknowledge their antipathy and elevated the conflict to the level of doctrinal dispute. Members divided into "Smithites" or "Jonesites" and a small denomination became two even smaller ones. In 1962, when I became pastor of a church in a small town in Pennsylvania, I found that that conflict had split not only the community, but also whole families. And some of the wounds still had not healed.

LIVING SKIM MILK

Although church conflicts usually appear as matters of principle, all too often they are really clashes of personalities and they have done the cause of Christ a great deal of harm over the centuries. As someone had put it, "we preach whipped cream and live skim milk . " Our professions of love and reconciliation are often negated by our examples of strife and alienation, for people expect a higher level of behavior from Christians.

The problem is not just that churches are prone to the same personal conflicts as other human institutions — after all, churches are composed of acknowledged sinners — but that after almost 2,000 years they still are woefully deficient in healing their human conflicts. Church people, I have found, are much more likely to "fight for their convictions" than to "reconcile for the sake of Christ."

Church disputes have been with us since the beginning and 2 Corinthians give evidence of a serious one between the Apostle Paul and some members of the church in Corinth. Unfortunately— for the sake of our curiosity, at least— Paul doesn't tell us what was the cause of that dispute. He knew what it was about and he knew the Corinthians knew, so we can only infer some of the issues from his letters. Apparently some of his critics had accused him of vacillating because he first planned to visit Corinth and then later called it off. Some of the Corinthians may have interpreted this as a slight. At any rate, although we can only guess at what happened, the conflict was very serious.

REAFFIRM LOVE

But, although one of Paul's purposes is to defend himself against some of these charges, his greater purpose is to effect reconciliation. It appears that someone in the Corinth church was punished in some way as a result of this conflict: "For such a one this punishment by the majority is enough; so you should rather turn to forgive and comfort him...So I beg you to reaffirm your love for him...Anyone whom you forgive I also forgive" (2:6- 10).

I have rarely seen congregational conflicts end in reconciliation. Expulsion or walk-out is the usual result. Seldom, in the midst of these conflicts, have I even heard the word "love," let alone seen it in action. (I hope my experience is the exception rather than the rule.) It is understandable that in our churches we should sometimes disagree and even that sometimes these disagreements might cause personal and congregational disruption. But in the midst of these conflicts we need to hear Paul saying to us: "I beg you to reaffirm your love for him" (her, them).

PRODUCT SAFETY IMPROVEMENT

For All Harvestore® Brand Structures

In July of 1987, A O. Smith Harvestore Products, Inc (AOSHPI) introduced an access door interlock system for all Harvestore brand structures It is designed to disconnect the power to the unloader when the access door to the structure is opened This device became a standard feature at that time All Harvestore structures erected according to AOSHPI specifications since then have an access door interlock system.

A properly installed and maintained structure access door interlock system will further enhance the safety systems on your Harvestore structure If you have not heard or read about this system, please read this ad.

Do You Own Or Operate A Harvestore Structure Equipped With A Harvestore Brand Auger Unloader... and It does not have an access door interlock system?

If you do, the access door interlock system can be supplied and installed by an authorized Harvestore system dealer, completely free of charge. It does not matter where or when you bought your structure and unloader. OUR PRIMARY CONCERN IS YOUR SAFETY. That's why we encourage you to contact us immediately.

- Return the coupon below, or
- Call 815-756-1551 and ask for the Product Performance Department.

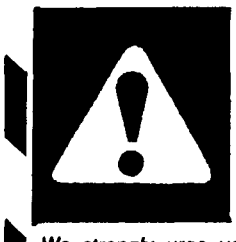
The access door interlock system is designed to enhance the safety systems already in place, including your operator's manual, safety decals, guards and shields, proper training of employees and operators of your equipment and good common sense



It can be dangerous to enter a Harvestore structure. Serious personal injury or death may occur if entry is made without following proper safety procedures. Before using Harvestore systems equipment, you should read, understand and comply with the instructions contained in the operator's manual, one can be obtained through your authorized independent Harvestore systems dealer. Decals placed on equipment also provide important safety and operating instructions which you should follow whenever using the products.

We strongly urge you to take advantage of this safety enhancement feature. Call today, or send the coupon to:

Manheim HPI Meeting Set

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — A special meeting for the Manheim Heifer Project International (HPI) Area Committee tomorrow evening (May 5) at the East Fairview Church of the Brethren.

A covered dish meal starts at 5:30 p.m. and guests may bring whatever they would like to eat.

There will be a special time set aside for the committee to meet with Jim Hoey, HPI Latin America director.

At 7 p.m., the program will be open to the general public to hear Hoey speak.

Hoey had worked in Bolivia for a number of years before returning to Pennsylvania for only a short time, until the 1985 termination program began.

HPI then brough him on staff to administer HPI's role in shipping DTP cattle to projects, and as that project ended, Hoey took over responsibilities for all HPI work in Latin America and the Caribbean.

Jim will not only bring us and update on current projects, but will share some of his future plans for HPI work in that area of the world.

Jim Hoey, 48, is the guest speaker for a public meeting of the Manheim Heifer Project International Area Committee Sunday evening at East Fairview Church of the Brethren. Hoey was raised on a family farm in Beaver Falls, is married with three daughters, and has spent the past 25 years working with HPI. He is an agriculture graduate of Penn State University, and has attended Drew School of Theology, studied Spanish at the latin America Language Institute, and studied rural systems analysis in development with Dr. Dean Freudenberger at Claremont School of Theology.

ABS Has Patent On Bovine Cloning

DEFOREST, Wis. — American Breeders Service (ABS), a unit of W. R. Grace & Co., has announced that it has received a patent protecting the process for making multiple copies of bovine embryos.

The initial research for this patent, which began in 1981, was conducted in Dr. Neal First's laboratory at the University of Wisconsin-Madison through a grant from Grace.

The patent covers the technology of multiplying bovine embryos by the transfer of nuclei.

This includes removing the nucleus (including DNA) from a recipient oocyte (egg), transferring the donor embryo nucleus to the recipient egg and fusing the donor nucleus to the recipient egg.

"This method allows the multiplication of genetically identical dairy or beef cattle with known genetic improvement, a first for the cattle industry," explained Dr. Marv Pace, director of ABS Specialty Genetics.

"This technology removes the gamble in anticipating an offspring's sex, genetic makeup and production capabilities, enabling dairy and beef producers to better manage their herd's production and profitability."

The process will also aid in the development of crossbreeds that can withstand the harsher climates in lesser developed countries.

Dr. Peter Boer, Grace executive vice president and chief technical officer, said, "This patent for embryo cloning technology is one of several important basic patents recently issued to W. R. Grace & Co. as a result of our commitment to advanced R&D. It is also indicative of the benefits of long-term cooperative programs between industrial and university researchers, in this case at the University of Wisconsin.

"This new technology will ultimately provide significant benefits to both the farmer and the consumer in terms of improved food production."

ABS now has bull calves born through this method which will be the first from this technology to enter the company's progeny testing program.

"Our goal is to have some of the first proven female clones available for market by the mid 1990s," said Dr. Pace. "We will then offer products including male and female high potential embryos to both dairy and beef producers."

American Breeders Service, a Grace Animal Services company, markets dairy and beef semen and related products throughout the United States and to more than 60 foreign countries.

FARM MANAGEMENT

WORKING TOWARD FARM FAMILY GOALS

Patricia L. Powley
Extension Home Economist

It is so true that no two people spend their money in exactly the same way.

The way you and your family spend money depends upon the way you want to live, the things you want to do and have. Your expenditures reflect your personal attitudes, values — what you consider to be most important. Setting goals can help you get what you want for your farm family.

What do you and your family want to accomplish with your time, your talents, your money, and your other resources in the coming year? What is your answer to such a question? Have you and your family really thought about this question recently? Where are you heading, how are you going to get there, and when will you reach this target?

The answer to these questions are a critical part of the management plan for your family. Without clear future targets, families may "wander" toward their goals in a much less efficient way.

Setting goals and selecting small steps to take in reaching them can give a family a sense of progress. These goals are so very important in the management of both home and farm business operations.

Family members have goals for themselves which are very individual. There are also goals for the family as a unit. Periodically, it is essential that each family member think about the aims or goals they have for themselves. It is also important to think about and discuss what goals are held for the family as a whole. The goals chosen can provide direction to your work within the family and on the farm.

Goals are very personal. Each family is different, so there is no prescription of one "right" set of goals. Each family has a differing number of members, ages, interests, abilities, needs, and wants. It is therefore important that each family set its own unique goals.

Values

For the individual, for the farm family, values help provide direction and meaning to life. They influence our behavior in the sense that they help give a basis by which to make decisions, to choose goals to work toward, and to make choices about paths to a goal.

Shared values serve as a bond among members of a family. They help provide the family with a common direction and some common goals.

What values do members of your family hold? Ask these questions:

- What do we believe is good and right behavior? These values — such as respect for life, for truth, for justice — are called moral values.
- What is beautiful? That which brings pleasure, joy, or meaning into life because of its beauty is called an aesthetic value.
- What is profitable? Those things that save money or make money represent economic values.
- What is useful? Practical values are reflected in those activities or articles that have use.
- What makes us feel good? Feeling values respond to the experiences and thoughts.
- What is fashionable? Prestige values are expressed through possessions and activities that have high status in society. Owning or doing the "in" thing reflects prestige values.
- What is beyond man? Spiritual values are those expressed through religion and activities that give meaning in an individual's life.

What are you family goals, your personal goals, your household goals?

Clearly establishing farm family goals can be a large challenge because family, business, household, and personal goals are all rolled up together in the day-to-day life and decisions of your family. For example, farm families may ask the goal question, "Shall we roof the barn or the house this year?" In the beginning it will be useful to think of the family, business, household, and personal categories separately, make some lists of goals, and begin discussion. Some of the goals will support each other, others may be in conflict. Resolution and priority setting comes later.

Long- and short-term goals

Goals vary by how long it takes to achieve them. Those that can be attained in relatively short periods of time are called short-term goals.

Short-term family goals might include learning a new skill such as re-upholstery of furniture, saving for a trip to visit relatives, or spending more time as "family time." A short-term goal for the family might be that of working out a plan to divide time between parenting and farm work, and yet finding time for you as a couple.

In farming, short-term goals focus on hoped for achievements such as renting additional land this year or increasing dairy production.

Goals that will be achieved over many years, a decade, are called long-term goals. Examples include debt-free ownership of a farm, addition of a family room, transferring farm ownership to children, and saving for adequate retirement income.

Experts recommend that in setting goals we consider the following:

- Short-term goals should be reachable. They should describe situations that you believe are possible to achieve in the designated time.
- Long-term goals should be believable. They should describe situations or conditions that you think you can achieve over the years. Avoid the "pie-in-the- sky" goals that you neither believe in nor find possible to achieve.

There are four steps to managing with goals. These are 1) Decide what you want or need. Set your goals. 2) Plan ways to reach each goal. Think about who or what can help you, your resources. 3) Try out the plan for a goal. Be willing to change the plan. The plan is designated to help you reach your goal. 4) Evaluate and judge how you are doing. Identification of goals is a family's first step.

All families and individuals do have goals which they really may or may not be aware of. Clearly identifying these goals, working toward common goals with an action plan, makes attaining the goals much more likely.

The resources needed may include time, effort, talent, and/or money resources. It may also include other people to whom we might go for information or assistance. Good management encourages the effective use of the individual's and family's resources to meet the goals set.

Do your first listings without discussing them with your spouse (or partner). Go back over the goals and assign ranking numbers. The goal you rank as number 1 should be the one that you feel is most important. Now compare lists with your spouse/partner.

The setting of goals requires adequate involvement of all members. Family situations must be created that will allow each person to contribute, according to their capabilities, to the establishment of gaols that are satisfying and acceptable to all. Open and free communication can be encouraged so that family members can become sensitive to the desires of others and willing to express their particular wants and needs.

Family decision-making is a group process, not an individual one. As you work together on the farm, you are working as a partnership and the key to success is communication and working together.

Lancaster Chamber Adopts Nutrient Management Policy

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The directors of The Lancaster Chamber of Commerce recently adopted a policy position toward nutrient management legislation, which is currently under consideration in the state House Agricultural and Rural Affairs Committee.

According to Jay Howes, manager of agricultural services for the Chamber, the board adopted the policy during a recent board meeting.

The policy position is:

As Pennsylvania's premier agricultural county, Lancaster produces in excess of $672.7 million in farm value of dairy, livestock and poultry products annually, representing approximately 30 percent of Pennsylvania's total production of these commodities.

While recognizing the tremendous economic benefit of this intensive animal agriculture to the economy of the county, The Lancaster Chamber of Commerce and Industry also recognizes that all industries must operate in the most environmentally sound manner possible.

The Chamber, therefore, has taken great interest in the report of the Governor's Select Committee on Nonpoint Source Nutrient Management and, in general, endorses its recommendations.

Recognizing the tremendous impact nutrient management regulations will have on both our agricultural sector and the general economy, the Chamber strongly believes that any specific legislation enacted should:

• Strike an appropriate balance between environmental concerns and economic realities.

• Specify the representation of all key sectors on the proposed Nutrient Mangement Advisory Board to the State Conservation Commission, including representatives of government agencies, Pennsylvania State University, production agriculture and commercial agri-business.

• Designate to the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture an integral role in developing specific guidelines for on-farm nutrient management planning.

• Not require multiple layers of certification or approval. Any plan prepared by a certified individual should not be subjected to approval by any agency at the county or state level.

• Insure that any nutrient management technician certification program instituted encompasses all individuals who prepare or review plans, allows for both private individual and commercial private sector certification categories, and is uniformly administered and enforced statewide.

• Supercede all municipal level nutrient management ordinances.

In summary, the Lancaster Chamber of Commerce and Industry fully supports nutrient management legislation that effectively balances environmental and economic considerations, provides for significant input from all relevant sectors in writing the specific regulations and adequately protects individual and private sector interests from excessive regulation and bureaucracy.

House Approves Egg Refrigeration Law

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — State Rep. Jess Stairs last week announced that his legislation to establish standards of refrigeration for shell eggs which are sold or distributed commercially received House approval by a 194-2 vote and has been sent to the Senate Ag and Rural Affairs Committee.

"House Bill 175 would require poultry owners who sell shell eggs to refrigerate those eggs at 55 degrees Fahrenheit within 24 hours of laying," Stairs said.

Once the eggs have been processed (washed and packed in containers for commercial use), the bill would require the eggs be refrigerated at a temperature at or below 45 degrees Fahrenheit until consumed or prepared for consumption.

Stairs said this provision would apply to food handlers, groceries and restaurants.

"The bill was originally prompted by outbreaks of Salmonella at several New York restaurants last year. Salmonella is an organism which can cause severe food poisoning when ingested. Eggs are particularly accommodating to the organism when not properly refrigerated and cooked," Stairs explained.

Suspected eggs in the New York incidents were traced back to a Pennsylvania producer, but evidence of Salmonella contamination was inconclusive. Improper food handling and preparation violations implicated the restaurants' food service methods.

"Obviously, we must develop methods to guarantee that Pennsylvania eggs are handled properly from the moment of laying to the final destination in the home or in commercial food preparation in order to protect the public health and preserve the excellent reputation of Pennsylvania's egg producers and processors," Stairs said.

"It's high time for food preparers and egg distributors to do their part to prevent Salmonella food poisoning. Fresh eggs have been wholesome sources of protein and will remain so if egg refrigeration is properly used," he added.

HB 175 would require that all egg containers be marked with the words "keep refrigerated," and a printed code which would allow an egg processor to indicate the date the eggs were processed, and the flock of origin.

Egg processor would also be required to maintain records of the flock of origin and the date of lay for each egg container for six months, and to make such records available to the Agriculture Department or Department of Environmental Resources (DER) immediately upon request.

Stairs said small egg processors (persons who maintain a flock of no more than 3,200 laying hens) who sell or market their eggs within two days of the date of lay predominantly within a 100-mile radius of the processing facility would not be bound by the new temperature and packaging provisions.

However, all small egg processors would be required to clearly print the date of lay on all egg containers.

To Preserve Commodity Programs

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — State Rep. Kenneth J. Cole, D-Adams, last week blocked a move that would have destroyed agricultural commodity marketing programs in Pennsylvania.

Cole lead the charge against an amendment to maintain a two-thirds majority vote when reauthorizing commodity programs in Pennsylvania.

The amendment, which was defeated in the House, was offered to Cole's legislation designed to improve the Pennsylvania Agricultural Commodities Marketing Act of 1968.

Currently, to reauthorize a marketing program, each board must receive a two-thirds majority vote of the membership.

Under Cole's legislation (House Bill 401), that was approved by the House, the number of votes required to reauthorize a marketing program will be a simple majority.

The bill is currently in the Senate Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee.

"It is vital that we have this program for agricultural products grown in the commonwealth," said Cole. "The programs administered by producers represent some of the most successful promotion programs we have."

John Rice, of Rice Fruit Company in Gardners, said he is delighted with the passage of HB 401.

"This is a very important piece of legislation. Not only does it reinforce the promotion of the apple industry, which is vital to Adams County, it also insures the survival of promotion programs for apples. I am grateful for the support of Rep. Cole," Rice said.

Last year, Rice served as president of the International Apple Institute.

"By defeating the amendment offered to this legislation, we have the ability to create and continue marketing programs that have been extremely successful in Pennsylvania."

Farmer Considers Details Throughout Tomato Growing Season

les, a full-time employee; and Cliff's father, Abram. The farm also manages a 200-sow farrow-to-finish operation.

But this time of year the family concentrates on growing, transplanting, and caring for the big cash crop, which Charles began four years ago.

"I started when I saw an ad in Lancaster Farming for tomato growers, and I called," he said. "I had thought about it over the years, something on the side to do."

The first year, he purchased plants out of the South and planted 35 acres. But some of the plants were bad and the harvest wasn't up to expectations. The next year, Charles erected a greenhouse and seeded his own plants, transplanting them into 40 acres. This year, another greenhouse was constructed and 80 acres were planted.

Class 3 competition

Charles won the award for the highest tomato yield in class 3 machine harvest competition for growers with 74 to 50 acres. According to information supplied by the Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Association, Charles harvested 1,652 tons of usable fruit for Furman Foods, Northumberland, Pa., in addition to Violet Packing and Jordan Packing on 70 acres for a 23.6 tons per acre average yield.

Charles raises his own greenhouse transplants, which include Early Pear, US 68, Ohio 8245, Ohio 1810, Heinz 7151, and Heinz 1784. The varieties are mainly Italian-type, which are smaller than garden types and more solid to aid in transportation and canning.

Charles starts seeding in mid-March. A vacuum seeder drops the seeds through individual tubes into a flat that can hold 288 plants. When the plants reach 5 to 6 inches in height, they are transplanted. Last year, transplanting occured on April 23 — this year, Charles began transplanting on April 25.

Cliff Charles waters half a million tomato transplants in one of the greenhouses on the farm. Charles was honored with a special tomato grower award recently at the Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Conference in Hershey.

Crystal Charles, 11, left and brother Eric, 10 hold up flats containing plants that are ready to transplant.

Mark Charles examines the placement of seed on a special vacuum tray at planting. The tray is dropped into position at right, bottom, where tubes lead into the seed holders in the flat.

Charles made improvements to a 3-row planter, which reduced the number of people needed to transplant the crop. Eight acres of tomatoes were transplanted on twin rows with 15-inch spacing between each, and 60-inch spacing between twins. Sixty-two acres were planted on 60-inch spacing between single rows with a 10-inch plant spacing.

Crop rotation

Charles used a three-year crop rotation which included corn, year 1; corn or barley and beans, year 2; and tomatoes, year 3.

Charles spread liquid hog manure from his swine operation in the fall at 15 tons per acre. At transplanting, liquid fertilizer was installed with the plant. After transplanting, Charles applied a liquid nitrogen sidedressing on the crop up to four weeks.

Weeds were controlled by cultivation and a preplant application of Tillam at 2.75 quarters per acre and Devrinol at 3 pounds per acre prior to transplanting. An application of Sencor at 0.5 pounds per acre was applied as needed to control escape weeds.

Diseases were controlled with a 7-10 day scheduled application of Bravo at 2 to 3 pints per acre. A foliar fertilizer went on with the fungicide. Insects, particularly the Colorado potato beetle, were controlled with Kryocide at 10 pounds per acre. Ethrel was applied at 4 pints per acre early. Charles said the beetles prefer the potato crops, and migrate off his land. "There's enough potatoes around, I think they head to the potato fields," he said.

Maximum red

Charles harvested from August 9 to September 5 of last year. He said he determines when to harvest by looking at the crop, and when "you can get the maximum red, that's when you harvest," he said. The machine harvest technique uproots the plants and vibrates the tomatoes free. About 10-11 workers hand-sort the ripe from the green tomatoes.

Although Charles obtained recognition for the yield, he said, "it wasn't that high of a yield. The yield we had this past year was our average yield the last four years," he said. "It's just that nobody else had as high a yield, I guess."

Last year, said Charles, they had higher tonnage laying in the field, but with the wet weather late in the summer, they lost quite a few tons from decay. But it was growing and transplanting his own plants that helped increase the yield.

"If you start with a bad plant, you don't have a lot of potential there," he said.

Under contract

Charles said most tomatoes are grown under contract because of the risks involved.

"You don't have to go under contract, but it's sort of risky not to," he said. "If everyone has a good yield, you have an open market for tomatoes, and nobody wants them."

Charles said he enjoys the challenge of tomato farming. "It's a crop that, if you take care of details, it pays dividends," he said. "It's a high-management crop. After you do something for a number of years, you want to try something else to see if you can do it. It's a high risk crop... you don't just put it out and forget about it."

Charles said, "I think it's a total of everything. You can't work on one thing and forget another part. And then, even though we do everything right, we are still at the mercy of the weather."

Massachusetts Lifts Barriers To Interstate Milk Sales

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — The Commonwealth of Masschusetts recently announced it is amending a milk law that required inspection by Massachusetts officials of out-of-state dairy farms shipping milk into the commonwealth.

This change is the direct result of a complaint filed three years ago against the Commonwealth of Massachusetts by Dairylea Cooperative Inc.

"We are extremely pleased by the outcome of this matter," said Clyde E. Rutherford, president of Dairylea. "The New York State Attorney General's Office and the New York State Department of Agriculture and Markets have worked diligently on behalf of New York dairy farmers to ease restrictions on the flow of milk into Massachusetts."

In filing the 1988 complaint with the Department of Agriculture and Markets, Dairylea charged that, at the time, both Connecticut and Massachusetts had unfair regulatory practices that hindered the marketing of milk produced in New York.

The complaint centered around regulations that prohibit New York dairy farmers from selling milk in either of the two states unless their farms pass inspections by Connecticut or Massachusetts officials, even though the farms are fully inspected by New York officials.

As a result of the complaint, Connecticut announced in late 1990 it had amended its milk laws to remove barriers to the sale of out-of-state milk in that state. All other states in the Northeast honor inspections performed by officials in the farmer's own state.

"Complying with Massachusetts regulations was not only burdensome to our members, but also represented a significant cost to Dairylea in terms of field personnel time and test expenses," Rutherford said.

Dairylea members repeatedly voiced their concerns about these additional inspections and expenses in the form of resolutions approved at the cooperative's past annual meetings. The cooperative responded by exploring channels for alleviating the problem.

"Dairylea believes that a cooperative has the responsibility to be a strong and effective voice for its members," Rutherford said.

Dairylea, a Syracuse-based dairy cooperative with 2,300 farmer members throughout the Northeast, participates in a milk marketing network stretching from Maine to Maryland to Ohio.

After graduation, Slusser worked for cooperative extension at Penn State and the Ohio State University. From 1967 to 1970 he was a Holstein fieldman in Pennsylvania. In 1970 he purchased Orange Bucket Farm, a 270-acre property with 100 head of registered Holsteins.

Slusser is president of the Atlantic Breeders Cooperative, an organization of more than 12,000 dairy farmers. He is a member of the Federated Genetics Council, a former board member of the National Association of Animal Breeders and a former member of the National Council of Dairy Cattle Breeding. Slusser also chaired the 1983 Pennsylvania Holstein Convention.

He is active in many community organizations and has spoken to a wide variety of groups, including community service clubs and youth groups. Slusser has taught a computer seminar for regional farmers and a financial workshop for bankers. He also has discussed careers in agriculture with high school students.

Slusser and his wife, Kaye, have two children, Lee and Dana. The family often hosts foreign exchange students as well as other foreign visitors.

Hiller didn't receive his award during the exposition, but was recently praised by Lamartine Hood, dean of the College of Agriculture.

"I am delighted that Mr. Hiller has received this honor for his outstanding dedication to the agricultural community and to Penn State," said Hood.

Hiller heads Agway Inc., a farm supply and food marketing cooperative based in Syracuse, N.Y., and owned by 91,000 farmer-stockholders.

He joined Agway in 1951 as a manager trainee and held several positions in the company before being named to the organization's top management position by its board of directors in 1981.

Agway has operations throughout the United States, including more than 600 stores and franchised dealers, 20 feed manufacturing plants, 45 fertilizer plants, 19 seed plants and a petroleum company.

Hiller will visit University Park as distinguished alumnus on May 31 and June 1 to tour several College of Agriculture departments and facilities and meet with students and faculty.

Hiller is a trustee of Upper Iowa University in Fayette, Iowa, from which he graduated cum laude with a bachelor's degree in biology. He also is chairman of the National Council of Farmer Cooperatives, vice chairman of the Syracuse Research Corporation and a member of the Chase Upstate Advisory Council of the Chase-Lincoln First Bank, N.A.

Johne's Testing Free For Volunteers

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Farmers who join a voluntary certification program to combat Johne's disease will receive free laboratory testing for that disease, State Agriculture Secretary Boyd E. Wolff announced on Tuesday.

Wolff said the department will also maintain records and issue certificates for herds that test negative to Johne's disease.

"Johne's disease causes significant losses to Pennsylvania's dairy and beef cattle herds," Wolff said. "Eliminating the disease will reduce production costs and enhance the value of Pennsylvania herds."

The new department-industry cooperative program was developed as a result of University of Pennsylvania and Pennsylvania State University research funded by the State Department of Agriculture (PDA).

"Although producers will be able to obtain laboratory testing for Johne's disease without participating in the certification program, only program participants will receive free laboratory testing," Wolff said.

Johne's disease is a chronic wasting disease of cattle, sheep and goats caused by a bacterial organism in the intestinal tract. Infected animals develop intractable diarrhea, become emaciated and frequently die. The disease is not contagious to humans.

There is no cost-effective treatment of Johne's disease, and vaccines have been of limited value. Research indicates infected animals should be removed from herds. Strict biosecurity measures can eliminate and prevent infection of herds.

As part of the new certification program, indemnity payments for Johne's disease will be discontinued May 15, 1991.

Debate Mired: Preserve Wetlands Or Rights Of Property Owners?

The first part of this article on wetlands appeared in last week's issue.

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

QUARRYVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — Grant Troop echoes the sentiments of many farmers when he said, "It seems like a real lack of coordination and cooperation among DER, the Corps, and farmers."

The frustration of paperwork, phone calls not returned, and conflicting advice given among the agencies that issue permits to those who want to make changes to their property, has caused landowners to petition the goverment to make changes in the regulatory program.

The two main regulatory agencies are the Department of Environmental Resources and the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. The Corps got involved in regulating farmland gradually. At first, the federal government authorized the Corps to regulate only public waterways. The prime focus was to protect navigation and the navigable capacity of the nation's waters. In 1968, permit applications received a "Public Interest Review" to include a consideration of fish and wildlife values, conservation, pollution, and ecology factors.

In 1972, the Federal Water Pollution Control Act also known as the Clean Water Act gave the federal government control over inland wetlands. It established a permit program to be administered by the Corps. The Corps would regulate the dredge and fill activities in the waters of the U.S. Initially, the Corps interpreted its jurisdiction to include only navigable waters, but in 1975, environmental groups challenged this position. A resulting court decision redefined navigable waters to include wetlands. Regulations to administer a wetlands permit program were published in 1977.

According to Roger Fickes, who is chief of the division of rivers and wetlands conservation of the DER, the agency received jurisdiction of wetlands through the Dam Encroachment Act of 1978.

To get an application to conduct activity in wetlands, a joint permit application must be completed in triplicate. Applications should be submitted to DER who sends copies to Corps, the Fish Commission, and retains one for their own use.

The Corps jurisdiction only covers dredge and fill activities, while DER covers any activity in a wetlands area. The Corps, EPA, DER, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, PA Game Commission, PA Fish Commission and eight DER bureaus may review a permit application.

The average time it takes to receive a permit is nine months to two years.

Grant Troop of Quarryville stands in front of wetlands that he was allowed to partially convert to farm land. Trupe said that attaining permits is a slow, frustrating process. He advises farmers to start on the paperwork for wetlands long before they intend to begin the work on it.

"Sometimes I scratch my head. I went through all the details and tried to do everything the way it was supposed to be done, and then I look around the area and see a backhoe tearing things apart without permits or consideration to anything and nothing every comes of it. Is it really necessary to go through all the paperwork for a few acres?"

Grant Troop crop farms three small farms of about 100 acres in the Nickel Mines area of Lancaster County. He majored in agronomy major at Penn State and had worked with the Lancaster County Conservation District and as a part-time farmer for two years before becoming a fulltime farmer and a substitute ag and science teacher for the county.

On the one farm, he had a few acres of land that had previously been drained and converted to crop land. Over the years, the drainage tile shifted and was crushed and failing.

Troop said, "In dry weather, the corn crop did great, but otherwise the area was often too wet to get much of crop."

He had to plan tillage, spraying, and harvesting around the moisture level in field, which often meant doing things late in the season.

In the fall of 1989, Troop decided to refurbish the tile system. The Soil Conservation Service had completed plans that did not designate and wetlands on his property other than a pond.

When Troop checked into the necessary steps to refurnish the tile, he was astonished. He said, "At that time, I learned startling details of when you can or cannot drain, the process of contacting various agencies and getting the permits needed."

By the spring of 1990, he continued to have extreme difficulty in scheduling agency personnel and was frustrated by the slow turnaround of paperwork. But he decided not to plant the field since he was certain that any day, he would receive permission to do the work.

"Everytime I contacted the Corps, I would talk to a secretary who said that the person I needed to contact was not in. My calls were not returned until six weeks or six months later or not at all.

The Corps were not sure where the paperwork was and the process dragged on and on.

"Neither the DER nor the Corps respond promptly," Troop said, "They were not very accomodating. I wasted so many phone calls trying to get hold of them again and again.

Eventually Troop had to reapply because he was told that his paperwork had gotten mixed up with Maryland paperwork.

"It seemed like a real lack of coordination and effort," Troop said. "It is difficult when the Corps is so far away and they have so large an area of jurisdiction."

Finally, in the fall 1990, Troop was given permission to do partial restoration to the tiled land.

The Corps said that part of the previously tiled land had converted back to wetlands and could not be drained. The area where crops had been tilled and tile remained underneath was designated as cropland, but he was not allowed to put in drain tile in the area that had converted back to wetlands. He was allowed to run a solid line through the wetlands to carry the water into the pond.

Troop did not need to pay for a permit since he had only wanted to replace tile, but he did need a permit to take water from tile system in field through a wetland to reach the pond. To take the four-inch plastic tubing through the wetland he also needed a utility line permit. Permits were needed for outfall structures. The line going from pond back to stream that needed replacement also needed a DER permit.

A general purpose permit was needed for utility line. Those permits allowed a contractor to put in the system according to SCS specs as long as no perforated pipe was put in wetlands.

Troop also had to contact the Fish Commission, notify local municipality, and send a letter to the county planning commission stating his plans.

"A large majority of us have always thought that it's our land and we can do anything with it that we want, so these regulations go against our grain a bit,"

On the other hand, Troop sees the necessity to preserve wetlands. He said, "I've seen an awful lot of swamps drained, about 90 percent are gone in this area. They had served as a catch basin for a lot of heavy rains. Now big storms make a big flush through system. In the summertime, streams are low, for there are no slow feeding of the streams from the swamps."

Troop said, "Each fellow tries to get a little more pasture or a little more cropland. Each sees it as improving his operation. While more production per acre and getting rid of muddy areas appear to be beneficial, if you stand back and look at the broader view, there is a lot of loss that the individual working the ground doesn't appreciate."

"Sometimes I scratch my head. I went through all the details and tried to do everything the way it was supposed to be done, and then I look around the area and see a backhoe tearing things apart without permits or consideration to anything and nothing every comes of it. Is it really necessary to go through all the paperwork for a few acres?"

Troop estimates it will take him 15 to 20 years before he sees any profit above the expense it took him to retile the farm land.

Troop offers these guidelines for other farmers.

• 1. If you have farmland that has been tiled in the past, as soon as you suspect the system is having trouble, get it maintained, because if it deteriorates, you are going to lose it because it will return to wetlands. The key is to get it done early.

•2. Be on the safe side and ask permission from all the agencies so you can be sure of Ok. You don't need the headaches of prosecution. Remain level headed. Document all conversations in a work ledger to protect yourself.

•3. Start application early, long before yo intend to do the work.

•4. Make sure you notify the proper agencies. Call the 800 utility number three days in advance. If you do not give advance notice, you are open to prosecution.

•5. If it is time to plant your field, plant. The biggest aggravation is waiting for phone calls and losing valuable time.

Troop said, "Each fellow tries to get a little more pasture or a little more cropland. Each sees it as improving his operation. While more production per acre and getting rid of muddy areas appear to be beneficial, if you stand back and look at the broader view, there is a lot of loss that the individual working the ground doesn't appreciate."

Rootworm Damage Possible In Del. Corn

NEWARK, Del. — This may be a year for high populations of corn rootworms and white grubs, according to Joanne Whalen, University of Delaware Cooperative Extension integrated pest management specialist. High populations could mean economic damage to the corn crop.

"The potential for corn rootworm problems has been relatively low because of soil types, climatic conditions and crop rotations," Whalen said. "But we found relatively high levels of corn rootworm adults in 1990. This could result in an increased potential for problems in continuous corn planted in New Castle County and northern Kent County in 1991."

The specialist warns that overwintering levels of white grubs are higher in both single-cropped and double-cropped soybean rotations. Making an extra effort to scout for these pests can help keep the population under control.

In addition to white grubs and corn rootworm, Delaware farmers should keep an eye out for seed corn maggots, wireworms and cutworms. The population size of soil insects depends on a number of factors, including crop rotation, soil type, tillage, cover crops and spring weather conditions.

Following is a list of soil insects and conditions favorable for an outbreak.

• Seed corn maggot — cool and/or wet springs when germination is delayed; warm weather in late winter will yield early fly emergence and egg laying before tillage operations; early-planted fields with poor drainage, high crop residues and/or where high rates of manure were applied.

• White grubs — old sod, pasture, hay or set-aside acreage; small-grain/soybean stubble or full-season soybean stubble fields with a heavy grass infestation the previous year (adult beetles are attracted to flowering grains and grasses).

• Wireworm — high organic matter, sod covers and heavy grass pressure in the previous season's crop.

• Cutworms — late-planted corn — black cutworm; early-planted corn, dingy and variegated cutworms; poorly drained soil, heavy broadleaf weed growth, soybean stubble from the previous season and reduced tillage.

• Corn rootworms — continuous corn planted on heavier soil types (hot, dry soils are abrasive to rootworm larvae), rotated fields planted on heavier soils where corn follows soybeans with a heavy infestation of volunteer corn or weeds, or after a weedy small-grain field.

"Being aware of the favorable conditions for pests can help you keep on top of a potential problem," Whalen said. "Scouting your fields for these pests helps you prevent economic losses."

To detect white grubs and wireworms, take soil samples about two to three weeks before planting, when soil temperature at 6 inches is 40 degrees Fahrenheit. Take the samples before the land is tilled.

At each site, sample a one-square-foot area of soil dug 6 inches deep. The quickest and most effective way to sort through the soil is with your hands. A minimum of 1 sample should be randomly taken for every 10 acres but no less than 5 samples per field. The treatment threshold for grubs and/or wireworms is 1 per square foot of soil.

Soil sampling is not effective for detecting potential cutworm problems. A preventive treatment should be used only in high-risk fields. These fields should still be scouted since a rescue treatment may be needed.

Scout fields on a weekly basis for small, irregular holes in leaves or cut plants. On 1- to 2- leaf stage corn, consider a treatment when 2

Association Honors Baldwin

HAMMONTON, N.J. — The Pesticide Association of New Jersey recently awarded the Distinguished Service Award to Don Baldwin for his outstanding service to the agricultural chemical industry.

After serving in the medical department of the United States Navy and the U.S. National Institutes of Health, Baldwin entered George Washington University, where he received a bachelor of science degree in zoology. He then went on to the University of Maryland Graduate School, where he studied animal physiology and biochemistry.

Baldwin's career began at Dow Chemicals (now DowElanco) in 1956. In 1968 he gave the import business a try, calling it "fun but not too profitable." Baldwin went back to Dow in 1970, where he worked in marketing until he became involved in technical service and development in the Northeast in 1975. He continued to work at Dow until his retirement in december of 1990.

Some of his distinguished accomplishments include moving Dow from a corn, cotton, and soybean agenda to a broader market view, including horticultural crops.

Don Baldwin, left, receives the Pesticide Association of New Jersey's Distinguished Service Award from Henry Rupp, association president. Baldwin was recognized for his outstanding service to the agricultural chemical industry.

In addition to his accomplishments, Baldwin has been an active member of the northeast branch of the Entomological Society of America and the Northeast Weed Science Society.

Senate Approves Amendment

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — State Sen. Noah Wenger's (R-Lancaster) legislation to authorize the issuance of temporary permits for fertilizer application for in-state trucks has been approved by the Senate.

Wenger said the bill would correct an inequity in current law that only allows out-of-state trucks to apply for 45-day permits for fertilizer application.

"This was an oversight in the law that penalizes farmers who use their farm trucks to apply chemicals and fertilizers," Wenger said. "And the passage of this law will correct the problem and enable farmers to receive the necessary permits."

Senate Bill 206 now goes to the House of Representatives for consideration.

Feed And Forage: To Buy Or Sell?

The Feed and Forage Marketing Network, originally developed and run by Cornell Cooperative Extension, is now available through the Northeast DHIA Forage Lab.

This service provides listings of people looking to buy and/or sell hay, silage, grain crops, straw, etc.

The listing is updated and mailed monthly. Anyone from anywhere can list items for sale or desired (The current list includes a buyer from Puerto Rico).

Buyers and sellers are listed separately in alphabetical order. The primary benefit of this service is to bring potential buyers and sellers together. The $15 annual fee entitles you to place as many ads as you wish throughout the year. If you have nothing to sell or buy, you may still sign up for the monthly newsletter by completing the form and returning it with the $15 fee.

Copies of the monthly listing will be made available to Cooperative Extension agents upon request. Clip out the accompanying form to use. Or for more information, contact the Northeast DHIA Forage Lab at (607) 257-1272.

who are sincerely interested in Ag Land Preservation.

Certainly this bill, if enacted into law, could well do more to preserve farmland without the required "up front" money, than the costly $100 million program now in place in Pennsylvania and could do it in a fairer manner. Under the development rights purchase program in effect, conceivably some could receive more than they paid for the farm while others, equally sincere and deserving, would be turned down for some reason or another not under their control.

Further, it is grossly unfair that a farmer, whose prices are held low by governmental "cheap food" policy programs, could not pass the family farm to the next generation. It is unfair that the farmer, who usually toils long and hard to help support the family, should not have the privilege of inheritance due to confiscatory estate tax laws, while for those of means with investments other than farmland have many means at their disposal to circumvent inheritance taxes legally.

While I mentioned ag land preservation, I would also solicit support for a drastic change in subdivision laws. The present system of large lot requirements is absolutely the most ridiculous laws imaginable. They are diametrically opposed to farmland preservation.

While on the one hand we will spend hundreds of millions to preserve farmland, we will require home builders and buyers to spend equally large sums for large and un-needed building lots which, in many cases, the homeowner will fail to maintain.

All of this makes absolutely no sense to me. We seem to be working at cross purposes.

I feel that I have a better idea and that is legislation on the state level requiring any developer of five or more homes on adjoining lots to install a sewage disposal system in the form of a waste treatment plant. This has been proven to be feasible and I understand the only problem is our DER has objections on the basis that it prefers large central plants rather than scattered small units. Perhaps our legislators should assert themselves over the whims of nonelected dreamers.

Thus, instead of building one house on two acres, eight homes could comfortably be built on that same piece of ground. Now this is true ag land preservation at little or no increased cost to anyone!

How about it, folks, can you join me?

Open Letter To Fellow Dairymen and Dairyladies:

Are you enjoying the milk checks that you have received lately? Is it still a laughing matter or is it starting to get serious for you yet? Just think, with a 25% cut in milk price you are still paying the same expenses plus more this year, but you are working every fourth day for nothing! It is almost funny to watch the politicians scramble around to find a solution to a problem for which they don't want a solution. The government is enjoying their "cheap food" policy at our expense and are in no hurry to change it. About the best compliment my late father-in-law had to say about politicians was that, "They couldn't figure out how to pour yellow liquid out of a boot without cutting the toe off."

We keep hearing about surplus, all kinds of surplus. The latest figures range from 2 to 4 percent depending which expert economist you listen to. We hear this price trend may go lower and be with us for a year or two before it changes, depending on which expert economist you hear it from. When you look at these exact figures, I wonder if they didn't go to the same school that the weather forecaster went to. With all their fancy gadgets and gauges and instruments, I still find myself spending a nice day in June in the barn trying to stay dry and many a winter day watching the snowplow scraping sparks off the road in a "blizzard". The next day you can listen to how the wind blew the wrong way, so they missed their prediction a little. Sounds like the government doesn't know which way the "wind" blows either.

Now, if we are to solve our income and surplus problem, we should observe how other people do it and I don't mean any government agencies. I feel we should look at another segment of agriculture which has simply and effectively solved their quality and supply problems, the vegetable growers. Go to any roadside stand and you will find quality produce at a good price. The "garbage" producers don't sell their products. Dairy farmers who make "garbage" milk shouldn't either. The bacteria standards should be cut in half or lower of what they are so we can have better quality which will sell for a reasonable price.

And now if I still have your attention, on to the "bigger", the surplus. If the vegetable farmer sees a surplus of lettuce, cabbage, whatever, where the price has dropped so he can't make any money selling it, he leaves it in the field for fertilizer and plows it under. We are going to have to get rid of some milk, but do it in a manner which doesn't upset the marketplace and still provide us with a price we can live with, without any cost to dear Uncle Sam, and it has to be done nationwide!

The Milkmarket Administrator has all our production figures every month from receipts from the dairy plants. He also has all the usage figures from retail sales, so he knows how much "surplus" there is every month. We dairy producers are paying for this service out of our milk checks at no cost to Uncle Sam, right? The M.A. people are on the road getting milk samples and checking drivers on their pick-up procedures all the time so they could represent the government. The dairy farmer is there to represent himself and the truck driver is there to represent the milk plant. If during any month a producer makes, say, 100,000 pounds of milk and across the nation there is a 2% surplus, at some time during the next month these three people get together, at the M.A.'s discretion, at each producer's farm and dump down the drain or load into a manure pit or spreader 2% or 2,000 pounds of milk and we will eliminate that surplus. If during this month this same producer makes the same amount of milk and the M.A. determines there is a 1% surplus, the following month at some time these three people meet at the farm and dump 1% or 1,000 pounds of milk. "Presto", surplus is gone. We get our price, and the government doesn't have to buy excess for which it has no money for anyway.

We don't need quotas or 10-tier pricing systems which would take a lawyer to figure out and sure would be of no benefit to us. Let each producer make as much milk as he wants. Don't destroy our "free" enterprise system. It sure would be a shame if a father or mother had to tell their children that they couldn't expand because they had a quota and couldn't make anymore milk to pay them, if they want to enter the farming operation. Those who want to stay farming must realize that they have to make a little sacrifice to help everybody. Don't cry over a little spilt milk! If you rationally consider the benefits to everybody, I don't feel this would be a bad solution to our problem. The government could keep a stockpile in storage for emergencies, say about 5 billion pounds, which they feel anything above this amount is surplus. Each producer can farm comfortably to his ability and capacity. We farmers would have a price for what is sold and used. We farmers could be free from some government restrictions concerning excess production. We farmers could get away from having more money deducted from our milk checks to support a surplus which is not there. The government could get away from support prices and get on with other business that they are intended for. We farmers could pay our bills and maybe buy some new machinery, so the manufacturer could pay his help, so the help could buy our milk so we could buy etc..... This would help stabilize the economy as agriculture is the backbone of this country.

P.T. Barnum once said, "There's a sucker born every minute!" Not all suckers are dairy farmers! Are we dairy farmers all suckers to get more government controls or are we willing to do something about it? I would almost be willing to bet my farm that you won't have to dump much milk before the government backs off, but my banker said I better not. He's not a gambling man!

Tips For Good Silage Management

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. — With few exceptions, all crops grown in the U.S. can be harvested, conserved, and fed as silage. Since the early 1950s, there has been a steady increase in both the total quantity of forage produced and the percentage of it conserved as silage.

Reasons for the popularity of silage include:

- It is much less weather dependent than haymaking.
- It is more suitable than hay for large-scale livestock production.
- It is adaptable to a wider range of crops such as corn, sorghum, and winter cereals.
- It allows the harvesting of maximum nutrients per acre.

When made by suitable techniques, silage should be well-preserved and lose a minimum of nutrients. These have been the goals since silage-making was introduced here in the 1870s.

Our knowledge of the biochemistry and microbiology of silage fermentation has increased tremendously in the second half of the 20th century. Silage is a product of anaerobic fermentation. It involves the conversion of water-soluble carbohydrates to lactic acid, which drops the pH to a level sufficient to inhibit any further biological activity (change) in the ensiled material when maintained under anaerobic conditions.

In most circumstances, good silage is achieved by encouraging the dominance of lactic acid bacteria and discouraging the activities of plant enzymes, clostridia, coliform bacteria, and yeasts. In the initial stages of ensiling, plant respiratory enzymes oxidize soluble carbohydrates, resulting in heat production and decreased amount of sugars available for fermentation.

Plant proteases hydrolyze proteins to amino acids and peptides. Soluble nitrogen can increase from 20% of the total nitrogen in pre-ensiled corn to over 50% within 24 hours post-ensiling. Silages containing high amounts of soluble nitrogen usually do not support optimum animal production.

The clostridia, coliforms, and yeasts compete with lactic acid bacteria for fermentable carbohydrates, and many of their end products have no preservative action. Clostridia are responsible for secondary fermentation which can convert lactic acid to butyric acid and degrade amino acids to amines and ammonia. Clostridial silages have high nutrient losses, high soluble nitrogen content, low digestibility, and low intake by livestock. Yeasts are linked to aerobic deterioration of silage, particularly during the feedout period.

It is likely that no other ingredient in beef and dairy cattle rations today is as variable in quality as silage. Making consistent, high quality silage requires attention to details and sound management.

Nine of the key factors that affect silage quality are additives, feedout, storage structure, crop, weather, maturity, moisture, chop length and filling, packing, and sealing. Because many of these factors are interrelated, it is difficult to present their significance individually. The silage maker must understand the importance of each.

Crop. Grow the crop(s) that offers the greatest economic advantage and produces the most nutrients per acre. With few exceptions, a satisfactory silage can be made from any crop.

The ideal crop should have adequate fermentable carbohydrates, a low buffering capacity, a physical structure suitable for compacting (to exclude oxygen), and a harvest period of several days.

Maturity. For "hay crop" silage (i.e., alfalfa, clover, orchard grass, hybrid sudan or sorghum-sudan grasses), harvesting at the optimum stage of maturity is often a compromise between increasing yield (quantity) and decreasing quality as the crop matures. For "grain-containing" silages (corn, sorghum, winter cereals) optimum yield and quality normally occur at about the same stage of maturity. The following harvesting guidelines are most common:

- Alfalfa- late bud to 1/10 bloom.
- Perennial grasses- before heads emerge.
- Summer annuals- before heads emerge.
- Corn- fully dented kernels.
- Sorghum- soft-dough kernels.
- Wheat, barley, oats, triticale, rye- boot (maximum protein content);- soft-dough kernels (maximum TDN yield).

Moisture. This is probably the most important factor affecting silage quality. Ensiling a crop too wet can result in seepage, undesirable clostridial activity and butyric acid, high fermentation and storage losses, and reduced silage intake and performance by livestock. Ensiling a crop too dry creates problems in eliminating air (poor compaction), achieving sufficient fermentation to lower the pH for preservation, and preventing spoilage from aerobic deterioration.

Chop Length. Common sense and attention to details are important. Sharp cutter knives, shear bar and knives closely adjusted, and the use of a recutter screen are all daily management decisions during silage harvest.

How fine (or coarse) should silage be chopped? Theoretically, 1/4 to 1/2-inch length is recommended, but fineness varies with the crop, power (fuel) requirement, tonnage per hour, etc. Short chopping permits greater compaction of the crop in the silo versus long chopping. This means there is less oxygen for the plant respiration and aerobic bacteria phases, less heat production in the ensiled material, and a higher nutritive value in silage.

Filling, Packing, Sealing The crop should be harvested and the ing value of the stored produce. Silage additives are receiving wide-spread acceptance in the U.S. as management tools that are essential for silage making.

Jersey Cattle Club Holds Annual Convention

WEST MIDDLESEX (Mercer Co.) — The Pennsylvania Jersey Cattle Club held its annual state meeting and calf and cow sales at West Middlesex.

Garnering several top production awards was Spruce Row Farm, owned by Jeff Peters of Crawford County. Spruce Row received several state and class production awards. They had the highest herd average for protein and milk for herds with from 50 to 99 head. The herd averaged 56.8 head with 16,913 pounds of milk and 632 pounds of protein.

A 5-year-old cow of Spruce Row, S.R. Top Brass Gidget was recognized for being the state's top protein producing Jersey cow overall, and the top 5-year-old, of course. Gidget made 20,927 pounds of milk, 821 pounds of protein and 970 pounds of fat and a cheese yield of $3,500.

Spruce Row Bold Venture Cracy was the top producing senior yearling with 16,374 pounds of milk, 631 pounds of protein and 738 pounds of fat with a cheese yield of $2,680.

Cheese yields were calculated with the formula: Cheese yield dollars = (2.927) x (protein) + (1.18) x (fat) - (.0023 x milk).

The first place finisher in the Jacob M. Brunges Production Contest was Jay Moose, whose Overnight Magic Julie produced 18,892 pounds of milk, 1,001 pounds of fat and 763 pounds of protein in 293 days. She had an ME of 21,197 pounds milk and 840 pounds of protein.

Donald and Angie Koontz had the herd with highest genetics and he received the Distinguished Service Award.

Other receiving awards inlcuded Gerald and Deborah Moose who received the award for high protein herd in the state.

Glen Kenny of Kenny Farm, of Lawrence received an award for having the highest producing 3-year-old, Brass Piano Song. She produced 23,374 pounds of milk, 776 pounds of protein and 1,010 pounds of fat with a cheese yield of $3,409.

Kenny's also the top 4-year-old, Top Brass harrient Flo. She produced 21,448 pounds of milk, 787 pounds of protein, and 985 pounds of fat with a cheese yield of $3,417.

John Vanderstappen, of Van De Jerseys, received an award for owning the herd with the highest fat production from among herds with from 50 to 99 head. Vanderstappen also received recognition for owning the high producing 2-year-old, Van De Fyn Haug Sally Dana.

John McConnel of Hillcrest Jerseys had high producing cow in the 6- and 7-year-old class, Jem Freedom Purple Passion.

During the calf sale, the high calf purchased was Vantage Sooner Treasure, a consignment by Donalk Koontz, of Fredonia, which brought $900 from buyer Craig Rhein, of Pine Grove.

Of the 11 calves sold, they averaged $546.36 and grossed $6,010.

The highest selling cow of the Jersey cow sale was a consignment from John Vanderstappen, Van De Duncan Jasmine Minnie. She sold for $2,100 and was sold to David Barr of Port Matilda.

The second highest selling cow was EHV Noble Gail, a consignment from Normandell FArms, in Liberty, which brought $1,900 from Ray Shepler of Reynoldsville.

The third highest selling cow was Bi-Wa Opportunity Begins, consigned by Billman Bros. of West Salem, Ohio. She sold for $1,850 to Dean Moose of New Wilmington.

The 39 lots of cows sold for an average of $1,126 and grossed $44,560.

In other business, Melanie Dietrich, daughter of Bill and Susan Dietrich, of Newburg, won the nod from a pannel of judges to represent the association as 1991 Pennsylvania Jersey Queen.

Melanie is a junior in high school and active in 4-H. She presently owns 22 Jersey cattle. She is also active in other school activities such as National Honor Society, track and Students Against Drunk Drivers, but she still helps with the daily chores.

The queen contest was run by Debbie Moose. The judges included Susan Crowell, editor of an agricultural publication; Carol Dreisbach, associate editor of Jersey Journal; and William Heald, with the Pennsylvania State University Dairy Department.

The speaker during the banquet was Gary Rogers who talked about "Production and Type Traits for Jersey Sire Selection."

breeding grounds for reptiles and harmful insects that carry deadly diseases. Wetlands are indeed responsible for wildlife's demise and problems. Swamps and wetlands stink and are absolutely hazardous to all health.

The best thing to do to wetlands is to drain them, fill them up and get rid of them. Keep the area clean and dry so none of the above mentioned will occur.

The wildlife lovers are just crazy and wild in their minds to be pushing wetlands preservation.

The EPA DER have been set up to protect our health and not try to kill us and rob us like they are.

Since they are doing just that their usefulness has been exhausted and therefore it's time to dismantle the EPA & DER. The wildlife lovers are just "free loading" on us and the taxpayers and violating the Constitutional rights of farmers and citizens of the United States. The Fifth Amendment clearly states that.

The farmer's property is his, not theirs, and they have no right to trespass upon those rights.

It's time to address this to the short-minded politicians and vote them all out of office for their "wetlands robbery schemes." The wetlands will not improve any wildlife, but it will diminish it further.

Pirates' Shortstop Pitches Ice Cream

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program has added a new hitter to their dairy promotion line- up — Jay Bell, a shortstop for the Pittsburgh Pirates.

In fact, he is a regular batter for the Pirates, but he is also pitching Pennsylvania Ice Cream throughout this baseball season.

"We are happy to have a talented ballplayer join our lineup," said Brian Ross, PDPP program manager. "Jay's strong record and consistent approach to baseball will be a great asset to our promotion program. We believe that consumers, both young and old, in recognizing Jay's support of the dairy industry, will further increase their own usage of Pennsylvania dairy products."

Bell has prepared for the PDPP, three 60 second advertisements that promote the goodness of Pennsylvania ice cream. The advertisements will be aired during the fifth inning ice cream break during the radio broadcast of the Pirates games on KDKA.

Along with the advertisements, Bell is also featured on a growth chart sporting the logo, "Milk. It Does A Body Good." The growth charts will be distributed at a May 12th game between the Pirates and the Atlanta Braves. Twelve thousand youngsters ages 13 and under who attend the game will each receive a growth chart.

To further this promotion effort, Bell will also be featured at a celebrity milking contest during the dairy industry's annual Dairy Day in Pittsburgh. The contest will be held at 11:30 a.m. on Tuesday, June 4, at Pittsburgh's downtown Market Square.

Last year for the Pirates, Bell led the team with sacrifice bunts, 64 percent of which led to a run. His batting average for 1990 was .254 with 7 home runs and 52 runs batted in. And, the Pirates have found Bell to be a reliable player at shortstop — his 153 starts at shortstop in 1990 were the most by a Pirate since Dale Barre in 1983.

Bell has a career fielding percentage of .966 and this percentage has consistently increased for Bell every year that he has been in the majors. His major league batting average is .246, including his tenure with the Pirates and previously with the Cleveland Indians.

A Little Leaguer and participant in Babe Ruth baseball, Bell has had a consistent interest in the well-being of young people. His support of the dairy industry and dairy products stems from this interest in young people.

Bell and his wife Laura reside in Valrico, Florida, in the off-season.

Vet Nutritional Forum Set

ELIZABETHTOWN (Lancaster Co.) — The next meeting of the Veterinary Nutrition Forum will be Wednesday at the Days Inn in Lancaster.

Dinner reservations are needed by Monday, however they are not necessary for those who wish to attend the program and forgo the dinner.

Guests speakers are to be Glenn Shirk, county extension agent, and Bruce Kreider, former multi-county farm management agent for the area. Kreider started a dairy operation about a year ago. The two are to discuss "Rethinking Dairy Economics And Management Strategies For The 90s."

The Days Inn is located on Keller Avenue, at Rt. 501. An informal social hour in the lounge starts at 6 p.m. followed by a dinner at 7 p.m.

Those planning to attend dinner should call Steven Wolfgang at (717) 367-8402.

Rootworm Damage Possible In Del. Corn

percent of the plants are cut or 10 percent of the plants show active leaf feeding. At the 3- to 4-leaf stage, treat if 5 percent or more of the plants are cut and live larvae are found.

Rootworms may be a problem since beetle populations were high in 1990. If you did not scout your fields for beetles in 1990 and you are planting continuous corn in the northern parts of the state, a soil insecticide treatment is probably justified. Some fields will not need a treatment, so plan to scout fields for adult beetles from mid-July to mid-August in 1991 to make the best decision in 1992.

In conventionally tilled, continuous-corn fields, you can scout for rootworm larvae before lay-by in 1991, and a soil insecticide can be applied at cultivation. The threshold is two or more larvae per plant (found by hand-sifting soil and visual inspection of root and soil).

The decision to use a soil insecticide should be based on the knowledge of how the many factors affect pest populations, pest history, and monitoring.

For more information on integrated pest management, contact your county Extension agent.

Capon Conference

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — The 1991 Pennsylvania Capon Conference is scheduled at the Fire Hall in Kreamer on Tuesday, July 16.

Contact David S. Bailey, Northumberland County Penn State Extension, Mountain View Lodge, Trevorton Rd., RD 1 Box 945, Shamokin, PA 17872 for a program.

Proceedings from the 1990 Pennsylvania Capon Conference are available.

The proceedings cover topics such as abstracts from "Poultry Science"; surgical instruction; field posting to solve a management problem; shrinking bags for RTC carcasses; processing equipment for capons; caponizing tools, needs for a commercial enterprise; organizing a 4-H capon program; fast starting chicks; preventing health disorders prior to caponizing; a computer scientist's analysis of live body weights from three commercial strain crosses; and a panel of 4-H capon members discussing production, processing, caponizing and the 4-H program in capons.

The proceedings can be purchased for a limited time for $4 each by writing to Linda Houtz, Penn State Poultry Extension, 213 Henning Bldg., University Park, PA 16802. Checks should be made payable to Penn State University.

NON-TOXIC WHITE SOYBEANS AT $12 PER BU. FOR NUMEROUS SOYFOOD FACTORIES ALONG THE EAST COAST. WE NEED MORE GROWERS.

Consumers are fed up with toxic food including druged meat. You would do well both from the proceeds of your crop and the change of your soil by turning to organic food, where the future is in farming.

You can also get a premium for non toxic yellow corn and beans and Speltz from livestock farmers who wised up and know they are better for livestock. If you feed livestock, grow your crop with our detoxifying fertilizer. If you need to buy feed, ask us where to buy non toxic feed.

A customer has 47.75 percent protein yellow beans, cleaned for seed at $16 per bu. of 60 lbs. Ask us about him. They should transmit their high protein to save you money. Some of our dairy customers are cutting back to almost no bought minerals because their crops contain the minerals. And their cows are doing better than others because the Creator can balance a ration better in the field than a man made computer can balance a ration out of toxic feed. Amen. Are you a Thomas or a believer? Ask for literature.

USDA Seeks Applicants for Organic Standards Board

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Department of Agriculture is seeking individuals to serve as members of the 15-member National Organic Standards Board, authorized by the 1990 Farm Bill.

The board will assist in the development of standards for the production of organic farm products and will advice the secretary of agriculture on the organic standards program.

To be nomiated for appointment to the board, an individual must be either an owner or operator of an organic farm, a handler (wholesale buyer and seller) or retailer with significant trade in organic products, an expert in environmental protection or resource conservation, a representative of a public interest group, or have expertise in toxicology, ecology, or biochemistry. The secretary of agriculture will appoint 14 board members from these nominees.

The fifteenth board member, representing cerfifying agents will be appointed once USDA certifies these agents. Certifying agents are those groups and individuals USDA will certify as qualified to inspect organic farms and handlers in organic products for compliance with organic standards.

Except for initial members, the normal board membership term will be 5 years. Initial members will serve staggered terms. A member cannot serve consecutive terms unless the member served an original term that was less than 5 years.

After reviewing applications, USDA will send biographical forms to those to be nomiated for appointment. To expedite the security clearance process required for the secretary of agriculture to make any board appointments, forms must be completed and returned within 10 working days of their receipt.

Notice of the request for applicants has also appeared in the Federal Register.

Applications for nominations, including complete resumes, should be sent no later than May 31 to Harold Ricker, assistant director, Transportation and Marketing Division, AMS, USDA, Room 4006-S, P.O. Box 966456, Washington, D.C. 20090-6456.

For copies of the Federal Register notice, and for additional information, telephone that office, (202) 447-2704.

On being a farm wife - And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

Bolstered by timely celebrations of Earth Day and Arbor Day, a new trend seems to be gathering momentum as it sweeps through the area.

The trend is trees.

Trees have too often been taken for granted in this part of the country where they - literally - grow like weeds. (If you don't believe that, c'mon down and help me yank the volunteer, stubborn-rooted maple seedlings that spring up annually among my perennial plantings.)

Much of the state is still covered with thick forests of towering hardwoods and tall evergreens. Even areas devastated by the ravenous appetites of gypsy moths are slowly regreening to low, shrubby, wildlife-loving undergrowth which will in time yield to a new generation of trees.

A single trip to parts of our own West, where barren desert dunes and scrubby-plant grazing ranges seem to stretch endlessly, can quickly renew one's appreciation for the sheer beauty and environmental benefits of trees.

Blessedly, trees are a renewable resource. And, suddenly, giving out tree seedlings has become highly popular.

Supermarket chains, restaurant franchises and all sorts of shopping entities offer seedlings as consumer enticements. Brides use them as wedding favors, new parents might offer them as celebratory handouts and they make great living memorials in honor of special people or occasions.

A lifelong tree lover, I find this trend absolutely uplifting.

Some of my earliest memories are of the trees of my childhood home. The lowest limb of one of the medium-sized Norway maples on our front lawn was at just the right height for a kid to grasp onto and swing herself up into the branches. Higher limbs split off at appropriately strategic spots for climbing perhaps 15 feet above the ground.

It was a great place to hide away for a bit, take in a bird's-eye view out through the leaves, and get away from little brothers - who eventually grew tall enough that the tree's privacy was forever lost.

Over the garage hung the branches of a sour-cherry, another favored tree, especially when laden with shiny, red fruit. Considerably smaller and easier to climb, the tree offered less challenge, but bore the makings of Mom's delicious cherry pies, puddings and preserves.

Among my first plantings as a farm wife was a small, perhaps a yard high, pussywillow. It had been started and given me by a second cousin who, even as youngster, carefully nutured the fruits of his green thumb.

Tucked into the damp, rich soil of our back lawn, and visible from the kitchen window, that pussywillow now stands about 25 feet tall. Early spring finds it covered with thumb-size, kitten-fur-soft blooms. Last I heard, that cousin was curator for a New England botanical establishment.

Long gone from our yard is a giant English walnut which littered the grass each fall with a yield of baking nutmeats. A streak of lightning during a violent thunderstorm late one summer afternoon cracked like a cannon when it hit the tree, splitting the bark from top to bottom and tossing bits of it 30 yards away.

Though the English walnut valiantly tried to recoup, the damage was terminal. Into the void went a pair of six-foot-tall willow trees, one for each of our two small youngsters. One a traditional weeping variety, the other a corkscrew type with curling, twisting branch habit, they form a sort of giant, green arch where the back yard gives way to alfalfa and corn.

Robins, mourning doves, sparrows, crows, the resident mocking birds, cardinals, even an occasional wren, use the willows for family rearing and singing stops. The remains of a tree-house ladder still cling to one tolerant trunk. And the cats scamper up them in claw-honing exercise as they run with me to the garden just beyond.

Trees give us beauty, economic benefits, shade, oxygen, homes for wildlife, hideaways for little kids and just generally enhance our lives.

Do the world a favor. Not just on Earth Day. Not just on Arbor Day.

Plant a tree. Any day.

REDUCE FAT TO 30% OR LESS OF TOTAL CALORIES

That simple waming has been repeated hundreds of thousands of times in newspapers, magazines, on television and radio and in hundreds of booklets and recipes since the Surgeon General's report was released in 1988.

But how can the average consumer be expected to convert grams and ounces to cups and tablespoons with little idea of whether they are hitting the mark?

With the help of the following basic fat arithmetic almost everyone, who wants to, can learn how to limit their total caloric intake from fat to 30% or less.

Rule #1. With some very minor differences, all fats and oils are high in calories. Whether a recipe calls for heavy cream, butter, margarine, or vegetable oil the calorie count jumps significantly for each tablespoon used. One tablespoon ot vegetable oil has 125 calories and one cup has 1,925 calories.

Rule #2. Nutrition information found on food packages is provided in grams. To understand how to use this infommation, you need to know that each gram of fat has nine calories. Therefore, if the calories per serving listed on the package is 300, and there are five grams of fat per serving, the calories from fat are 45. By dividing 45 by 300, you discover that only 15 percent of the calories in that food come from fat.

Rule #3. Some cookbooks, magazines and newspaper articles list the fat and calories in each serving. Others do not. Get a cookbook that does.

Rule #4. Many favorite recipes do not give you a clue as to how many calories there are per serving. But you can make an educated guess if you can remember that carbohydrates such as the sugar or starch found in fruits, vegetables, breads and cereals, grains, flour and sweeteners have four calories per gram. Proteins found in meat, fish, poultry, beans and other foods also have four calories per grams. Fat has more than twice the calories of carbohydrates and protein. Remember, however, that high protein foods also often contain fat, so choose leaner cuts of meat, trim fat and remove skin from poultry to keep the fat calories down.

The following two recipes provide excellent substitutes for traditional high-calorie, high-fat favorites.

MOCK MAYONNAISE

2 tablespoons cornstarch
1 cup cold water
4 tablespoons non-fat milk powder
1 teaspoon corn oil
2 tablespoons plain low-fat yogurt
1 teaspoon Dijon mustard
1 tablespoon lite mayonnaise
1/2 teaspoon prepared horseradish
1 teaspoon sugar
4 teaspoons cider vinegar
1/2 teaspoon dry mustard

Whisk together comstarch, cold water and milk powder. Bring to a boil, stirring constantly, and boil for two minutes. Remove from heat and cool completely. Transfer to food processor or blender when cool. Add remaining ingredients and blend for several seconds until smooth. Chill thoroughly before using. Makes one cup. (Has only 15 calories per tablespoon compared with regular mayonnaise at 100 calories per tablespoon).

CREAM CHEESE SUBSTITUTE

1 cup plain low-fat yogurt
3 tablespoons part-skim ricotta cheese
2 teaspoons powdered sugar.

Combine all ingredients. Blend well. Place in sieve lined with three thicknesses of cheesecloth or plain paper toweling and allow to drain in refrigerator for 24 hours. Remove carefully and blend again before using. Consistency should be very thick and resemble cream cheese in texture. Makes 1 cup. (Has less than 12 calories per tablespoon compared with regular cream cheese at about 50 calories per tablespoon).

Take A Buggy Ride At Detter's Farm

Joyce Bupp
York Co. Correspondent

DOVER (York Co.) — When Loren Detter began tearing out the old plaster and lathing of their summerhouse's loft, his wife Ailean was not convinced it was worth the trouble.

"It was the worst," she says of the deteriorating walls, crumbling window frames and open-air gaps of the structure.

Painstakingly remodeled, the summerhouse upper level is now the "Hideaway," a honeymoon suite of sorts at the Detter's newly-opened bed and breakfast on their Dover-area farm. Exposed beams, textured ceiling, delicate wallpaper and soft carpeting bely the loft's original state and pay tribute to this couple's vision of sharing with guests their home of 33 years.

A canopy bed in the Hideaway has been custom built by Loren to fit under the loft's sloping ceilings. He spent more hours than he cares to remember refinishing and restoring the heavy, original, wooden door to the enclosed stair entry and its antique hardware. A private bath, soft easy chairs and a view overlooking the farm's rolling meadows offer homey touches to guests in the cozy loft.

The Hideaway is one of three private rooms remodeled and tastefully decorated by Loren and Ailean in between crop and cattle chores on their farm along the Conewago Creek north of Dover. Although they have hosted guests periodically, including a Japanese exchange student who lived with the family for a year, their bed and breakfast at 6631 Old Carlisle Road "offically" opened on May 1.

Their Victorian and Country Brass rooms, which share a bath and dressing area, are named by Ailean based on the decorative theme of each. Antiques, stenciling and restored pieces, including Loren's own infant crib, add personal touches. Air conditioning, television, cold running water and fire safety equipment in each room offer modern amenities to the traditional feeling of the large, century-old farm home.

Layout of the house, with its attached summerhouse, lends itself ideally to a bed and breakfast establishment. A large family area, complete with fireplace and breakfast nook, connects the main portion of the house with the former summerhouse. Farm tools and collectibles decorate the fireplace, which is kept burning for guests comfort and enjoyment. Entrances to the guest rooms open off the central gathering room, ensuring a measure of privacy for the Detter's personal living area.

"If our guests enjoy breakfast outside on warm mornings, I'll serve it in the gazebo on the lawn," says Ailean. Her breakfast specialities include fresh fruits served on family china and homemade bread baked fresh daily. An antique table in a secluded corner is kept stocked with a selection of beverages and tidbits for evening snacks. For visitors with musical inclination, a piano awaits willing players.

Their interest in people led them into not only opening their home to guests but also into a related sideline speciality of offering carriage rides. The Detters have three Amish-style buggies, maintained for both their guests and for local folks looking for a unique, special-occasion, mode of travel. A few brides and grooms have already been delivered to their receptions in the carriages, a guaranteed spectator-gathering event.

"I've been around horses all my life," notes Loren, who grew up helping his family to farm with teams. "I was the youngest, so they gave me the horses to drive; my brother drove the tractor."

Two standard-bred driving horses wait in the exercise lot near the barns, one of them recently acquired after being retired from racing. Calmness in their driving horses is a top priority, since the mere sight of the horse and buggy always draws children.

Their new buggy was custom designed to their specifications by the White Horse Carriage Shop. Beautifully finished with crushed blue velvet, it features rollup sides for open-air rides in pleasant weather, ornately carved instrument deck, and a special, side-opening door and steps for the wide skirts and trains of bridal gowns.

Loren dresses for the carriage rides in dark suit and tie with top hat. He nearly froze, even dressed with extra layers of clothes, on a Christmas ride contracted by one customer. The ride was around Lake Meade, a 10-mile drive in itself, plus travel of many more miles to get there and back.

He also delivered an 81-year-old to a surprise, family birthday party in her honor and thoroughly enjoyed his part in a recent marriage proposal. The client wishing to propose plotted with Loren for a carriage ride along the Conewago Creek, complete with picnic basket, for his intended. Even the dreary, rainy, foggy conditions that set in along the creek that evening failed to put a damper on that memorable carriage excursion.

Recently Lorne and Ailean have been sharing a slide program on their trip last summer to Japan. Twelve years ago, the Detters and their four children hosted Japanese exchange student Masayo Matsukawa for a year. They have kept in touch since then and last May were guests of her and her family.

"They treated us like royalty," Ailean says of the memorable visit. "The people were wonderful. They're in an area where many of the Japanese never had seen an American, so many people were fascinated with Lorne's blue eyes."

The Detter's bed-and-breakfast facilities serve the family well when the Detter children come to visit. Only daughter Sharon Shue lives nearby. Daughter Judy Brandenburg and her husband are ministers in Mt. Vernon, Ohio, and Susan Phillips and her husband Rodney both assist as ministers at Dover, Ohio. Son David and his wife also assist as ministers at the church in Upland, California. Lorne and Ailean currently have nine grandchildren, and will soon become grandparents once again.

Accustomed to children in their gracious home, the Detters welcome youngsters as guests and offer a wide expanse of lawn and a private meadow picnic area where they can romp and play. A herd of Charolais cattle and hay production keep Detter's Acres a working operation, giving visitors a chance to experience farm living.

Lorne and Ailean share a love of people, which is reflected in their backgrounds. Lorne was for many years a feed sales representative for Spangle and Sprenkle Feed Company of York, new Hoke Mills, and served six years as a supervisor for Dover Township.

Ailean is secretary for the York County Farmers Association, handles local paperwork for 199th District Legislator Rep. John Brojous, and teaches painting from her own art gallery on the farm. A believer in community service, she is currently running for a township supervisor candidacy in the primary election.

Detter's Acres Bed and Breakfast is 10 minutes from Ski Roundtop and Pinchot Park. Historic York, Gettysburg, Lancaster, Hershey and Harrisburg are all within about a one-hour drive. The Detters welcome inquiries and may be reached at 3361 Old Carlisle Road, Dover, PA 17315, phone 717-292-3172.

Detter's Acres Bed and Breakfast is open for guests looking for a vacation on a working farm. A custom-made Amish buggy is available at the Detters for both guests and special-occasion rides.

In her well-stocked kitchen, Ailean Detter bakes bread and prepares breakfast specialities for their guests.

A focal point of the guest area at Detter's Acres is the large fireplace, decorated by items like the iron pot Lorne holds.

MICROWAVE MINUTES

By JOYCE BATTCHER

"How can I adapt my old recipes to the microwave?" That's a question I've often been asked during my 13 years of writing "Microwave Minutes."

Here are a few tips on adapting oven casseroles to quick microwaving, plus a few delicious new recipes, too.

Look for a microwave recipe with the same kinds of main ingredients and amounts as your "old" recipe. Then use the same size dish and cover (if any) and follow the microwave timings. Stir, rearrange or rotate as the recipe directs.

If you can't find a microwave recipe as a guide, your recipe may still be good to adapt. Already-cooked foods that just need heating are perfect for microwaving. Most juicy, baked main dishes or those that call for a cover adapt well. Combinations that can be stirred micro-cook evenly and quickly.

Layered oven casseroles — like those made with layered raw potatoes — or casseroles that need crisping, such as most egg stratas, or casseroles to feed a crowd are best done in your conventional oven.

Many oven-baked recipes micro-cook in about one-fourth the time. Start by microwaving less than one-fourth and add more time as needed. Stir and check for doneness often. Be careful not to overcook.

Remember cooking time changes if the amount, temperature, size or shape of food changes. More food or colder food means longer cooking time. Large chunks need more cooking time than thin slices.

To prevent boilovers, choose a dish one size larger than your conventional recipe calls for. For even cooking, a round deep dish is better than a shallow rectangular one.

Some recipes need changing. Start by reducing liquid by about one-fourth. If necessary, you can add more liquid before or after standing time. (For casseroles with raw pasta or rice, keep amount of liquid the same.) If water plus another liquid — such as tomato juice or broth — is called for, reduce the water and use the same amount of other liquid to keep a rich flavor. In many cases, using a richer ingredient — such as tomato sauce instead of tomato juice, or concentrated broth instead of regular strength — allows you to reduce the liquid without diluting flavor.

Precook some foods before adding other ingredients. Ground meat is usually cooked until done before adding other ingredients. Raw onion, green pepper and celery can be tenderized before adding other ingredients. Otherwise, in quick-cooking recipes they often remain crunchy. Precook them with a tablespoon or so of water, tightly covered.

Cut foods in even-size pieces. Thin, small even-size pieces cook faster and more evenly than thick irregularly-shaped pieces. For fastest cooking, try substituting cooked or convenience foods — such as cooked meats and vegetables, tiny or cooked pasta, and instant or cooked rice.

Add toppings at the end for extra color and flavor. Sprinkle cooked food with shredded cheese; cover and let stand until cheese melts. For a low-calorie topping, sprinkle lightly with paprika before standing time. Add a crisp topping — like canned fried onions, cracker crumbs or dry bread crumbs — after standing time. Microwave uncovered for 30 to 60 seconds just to heat topping.

Easy Chicken and Rice Casserole

1 can (16 ounces) regular cut green beans, undrained

1 box (6¼ to 6¾ ounces) instant long-grain and wild rice mix

1 can (10¾ ounces) condensed cream of onion or other cream soup

1 pound uncooked chicken breasts, sliced into thin strips

1 can (4 ounces) sliced mushrooms, undrained

½ cup water

¾ to 1 cup shredded Cheddar cheese

In a 3-quart microwavable casserole, stir together all ingredients (including raw rice and seasoning packet), except cheese. Cover with lid. Microwave (High) 15 to 20 minutes, stirring twice, or until rice is tender. Sprinkle with cheese, recover and let stand until cheese melts. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Each serving— ⅛ of recipe: 215 calories, 18g protein, 7g fat, 20g carbohydrate, 673mg sodium, 45mg cholesterol.

Notes on adapting: The original baked, covered, at 350° F for 45 to 50 minutes. Then it was topped with the cheese and returned to the oven to melt cheese. It used a regular seasoned rice mix and the same amount of water. Ingredients were layered in a buttered 8x12 dish. Soup and water were heated together and poured atop.

Creamy Asparagus and Turkey

2 to 2½ cups cooked asparagus pieces

1 to 1½ cups diced cooked turkey

4 oz. (½ carton) cream cheese with chives, cubed

½ cup (2 ounces) shredded Provolone cheese

2 tablespoons milk

2 tablespoons sliced pimento

2 tablespoons seasoned fine bread crumbs

Paprika

Stir all ingredients together, except bread crumbs and paprika, in a microwavable 1½ -quart casserole. Microwave (High), covered, 4 to 6 minutes, stirring once, or until hot. Sprinkle with crumbs, then with paprika. Microwave (High), uncovered, 30 seconds to heat topping. If desired, serve on rice or cooked noodles. Makes 4 servings.

Each serving: 240 calories, 18g protein, 15g fat, 6g carbohydrate, 244mg sodium, 72mg cholesterol.

Notes on adapting: The ingredients, including ¼ cup milk, were poured into a buttered casserole, topped with crumbs, dotted with 1 tablespoon butter and baked at 350° F for about 30 minutes or until bubbly.

Favorite Baked Bean Casserole

1 pound ground beef

1 medium onion, chopped

1 can (16 ounces) pork and beans

1 can (16 ounces) wax beans

1 can (16 ounces) green beans

2 cans (16 ounces each) kidney beans

½ cup brown sugar

½ cup catsup

1 tablespoon vinegar

2 teaspoons prepared mustard

Place ground beef and onion in 3-quart microwavable casserole. Microwave (High) 5 to 6 minutes or until meat is no longer pink, stirring once. Stir in pork and beans. Drain all other beans, discarding liquid. Add drained beans and remaining ingredients to meat mixture. Cover with lid or waxed paper. Microwave (High) 8 to 10 minutes, stirring after each 4 minutes, or until hot. Makes 16 to 20 servings.

Each serving— 1/20th of recipe: 152 calories, 10g protein, 4g fat, 21g carbohydrate, 269mg sodium, 18mg cholesterol.

Recipes From Favorite Places

How many times do you wish that you'd have the recipe for that lucsious dessert or entree at your favorite restaurant?

Although some restaurants are hesitant to reveal their recipes, others gladly share them. They believe word-of-mouth advertising is still the best. If you tell others you have a heavenly recipe from a restaurant, that person is more inclined to order the food from the restaurant than to cook it.

Two of the recipes that were mailed to us are from the Cloister Restaurant. Elva Stauffer, owner of the Cloister Restaurant at 607 W. Main St., Ephrata, said, "We think it is good advertising to share recipes."

Elva and her husband farmed for many years on the family farm. Years ago, her grandfather ran a horse sale and Elva operated a food stand for the clientel. It was Elva's dream to have her own restaurant, and 19 years ago she heard the Cloister Restaurant was for sale.

She and her husband purchased the restaurant that is now known for its Pennsylvania Dutch cooking. "We make everything from scratch," Elva said.

The menu is always changing since she prefers to use fruits and vegetables in season. Cloister Restaurant is famous for its apple dumplings, and strawberry and blueberry tarts.

Another way to obtain restaurant recipes is through newspapers and magazines. These are often printed when commodity groups ask famous chefs to develop recipes using their products. These recipes are then shared with the public to encourage the consumer to try the products. The Apple Growers asked 11 of America's most talented chefs to create luncheon menus using different apple varieties for every course. Some of these are printed in today's collection. The complete collection is available free to our readers. If you would like a brochure called "The Romance of Flavors," send a self-addressed, stamped #10 envelope to The Washington Apple Commission, P.O. Box 550RF, Wenatchee, WA 99807.

CHILLINGSWORTH PUMPKIN ROLLS

1 tablespoon plus ¾ teaspoon dry yeast
¼ cup warm water
1 cup canned solid pack pumpkin
1 cup warm milk
¾ cup sugar
2½ tablespoons vegetable oil
2¼ teaspoons salt
5¼ cups all-purpose flour
4 tablespoons unsalted butter, melted

Sprinkle yeast over warm water in small bowl; stir to dissolve. Mix pumpkin, milk, sugar, 2½ tablespoons oil and salt in heavy-duty mixer fitted with dough hook. Blend in yeast mixture. Gradually beat in enough flour 1 cup at a time to form stiff dough. Dough can also be mixed by hand. Continue beating until dough forms ball.

Lightly oil large bowl. Add dough, turning to coat. Cover bowl with plastic. Let dough rise until doubled in size, about 1½ hours.

Lightly grease 2 large cookie sheets. Punch dough down. Turn dough out onto lighlty floured surface. Divide into 3 pieces. Divide each piece into 12 pieces. Cover with towel for 10 minutes.

Roll each dough piece into smooth ball. Place 1 ball in center of each prepared sheet; arrange 17 balls around each in concentric circles with sides just touching. Cover rolls with towels and let rise in warm draft-free area until doubled in volume, 45 minutes.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Brush rolls lightly with 2 tablespoons butter. Bake until rolls are golden brown, about 30 minutes. Brush with remaining melted butter. Serve rolls warm.

CHICKEN PIE WITH BISQUICK CRUST

For the filling:
4 cups chicken broth
3 carrots, cut crosswise into ¼ -inch slices
¼ pound red potatoes, quartered lengthwise into ½ -inch pieces
2 large ribs of celery, cut crosswise into ½ -inch pieces
2½ cups cubed cooked chicken
1 onion, chopped
6 tablespoons unsalted butter
6 tablespoons all-purpose flour
¼ teaspoon dried thyme, crumbled
¼ teaspoon freshly grated nutmeg or to taste
½ cup minced fresh parsley leaves

For the biscuit crust:
1⅓ cups all-purpose flour
1½ teaspoons double-acting baking powder
4 teaspoons cold unsalted butter, cut into bits
2 tablespoons cold vegetable shortening, cut into bits
⅓ cup grated sharp cheddar
1 large egg
about ⅓ cup buttermilk
an egg wash made by beating 1 large egg yolk with 1 tablespoon milk

Make the filling: in a saucepan bring the broth to a boil, add the carrots, the potatoes, and the celery, and simmer the vegetables, uncovered, for 10 to 15 minutes, or until they are tender. Transfer the vegetables with a slotted spoon to a large bowl, reserving the broth, and add the chicken to the bowl. In another saucepan cook the onion in the butter over moderately low heat, stirring, until it is softened, add the flour, and cook the roux, stirring, for 3 minutes. Add 3 cups of the reserved broth in a stream, whisking, reserving any remaining broth for another use, and bring the mixture to a boil, whisking. Add the thyme and simmer the sauce, stirring occasionally, for 5 minutes. Stir in the nutmeg, the parsley, and salt and pepper to taste, pour the sauce over the chicken mixture, and stir the mixture gently until it is just combined. Transfer the mxiture to a 2-quart shallow baking dish or divide it among four 2-cup shallow baking dishes. The filling may be made one day in advance and kept covered and chilled. Bring the mixture to room temperature before continuing with the recipe.

Make the biscuit crust: Into a bowl sift together flour, baking powder, baking soda, and salt, add butter and shortening, and blend the mixture until it resembles meal. Add cheddar and toss the mixture. Into a liquid measuring cup, break the egg, add enough of the buttermilk to measure a total of ½ cup and beat the mixture with a fork. Add the egg mixture to the flour mixture, stirring until the mixture just forms a dough, gather the dough into a ball, and on a floured surface pat it out ½ -inch thick. Cut out as many rounds as possible with a 2-inch fluted round cutter dipped in flour, gathering the scraps and patting the dough out again in the same manner.

Arrange the rounds on the chicken mixture, brush the tops of the rounds with a fork. Bake the pie in the middle of a preheated 450 degree oven for 15 to 25 minutes, or until the biscuits are puffed and golden and the filling is bubbling. Serves 4.

4 eggs, slightly beaten
1½ cups milk
1 teaspoon dry mustard
½ teaspoon dried onion flakes
8 slices bacon, cooked and crumbled
1 cup shredded Cheddar cheese

Remove crust from bread; place in a lightly greased 8-inch square baking dish and set aside.

Combine eggs and next three ingredients; pour over bread. Sprinkle bacon over casserole; cover and refrigerate eight hours.

Remove from refrigerator; let stand 30 minutes. Bake, covered, at 350 degrees for 20 minutes.

Uncover, sprinkle with cheese, and bake an additional 5 minutes. Let stand 5 to 10 minutes before serving. Serves 4.

Brunch Pie

1⅔ cups cheese cracker crumbs, finely rolled
¼ cup butter, softened
½ pound ham, cut in strips
½ pound turkey, cut in strips
10½ ounces condensed cream of chicken soup
¼ cup milk
½ cup grated Cheddar cheese
3 eggs, beaten
2 teaspoons prepared mustard
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce

Thoroughly blend cheese cracker crumbs and butter. Press firmly against bottom and sides of a 9-inch pie plate. (The easy way is to press crumbs into place using an 8-inch pie plate). Layer ham and turkey strips in pie shell, reserving a few strips for garnish. Combine soup, milk, and grated cheese. Heat, stirring until cheese melts. Add beaten eggs, prepared mustard and Worcestershire sauce. Pour over ham and turkey. Top with reserved strips. Bake in 300 degree oven for 45 minutes or until knife inserted in center comes out clean. Serves 4 to 6.

Early American Pioneer Sour Buckwheat Cakes

Use only "whole" stone ground buckwheat
3 cups buttermilk
3 cups buckwheat flour
1 teaspoon salt
2 packages yeast
Water as needed to make medium batter

In late evening, mix together in large bowl or pitcher. Active batter should double in volume. Cover and place in refrigerator overnight. In a.m. add to batter:

1 tablespoon dark molasses
1 teaspoon baking soda

Grease black iron griddle between every cake with chunk fresh pork fat. (Local butcher will give you pieces of fresh pork fat. Keep it frozen until needed).

Make syrup of plain white sugar and water. Boil and set aside. This syrup is superior to maple syrup for buckwheat cakes.

Double-Cheeseburger Days Kick Off Grilling Season

CHICAGO, IL — The beef and dairy industries are teaming up for the sixth annual "Double Cheeseburger Days" which will help launch the summer grilling season. With the help of Heinz and Ore-Ida, more than $22 million will be invested in a fully-integrated storewide promotion which kicks-off May 1, 1991.

"This effort allows retail operations to cash in on a coast- to-coast promotion and gives them an opportunity to feature the various types of ground beef they carry in their meat case," says Jane Frost, chairman of the Beef Industry Council retail subcommittee.

This joint checkoff-funded effort is cooperatively sponsored by the Beef Board, Beef Industry Council and the American Dairy Association.

This Big Cow Went To School

LORIN BEIDLER
Special to Lancaster Farming

SPORTING HILL (Lancaster Co.) — Gym classes at Manheim's Sporting Hill Elementary School had to look twice one Friday morning as their laps around the school yard took them past the building's southern corner. After all, it's not every day that a cow and calf are permitted to graze on school grounds.

The bovine and her young son were not unattended, however. At the other end of their halters were Nelson and Alma Wenger, two of the local farmers who participated in Manheim Central's Ag Week in the Classroom recently.

Ag Week in the Classroom, which has been held at Manheim Central in each of the last six years, is conducted by the Lancaster and Pennsylvania Farmers' Associations with the intention of raising the student body's awareness of agriculture. Dorothy Myer, who along with her husband Carl, operates a dairy farm near Manheim, was asked by the Lancaster Farmer's Association to line up local farmers to give presentations on their type of farming to the district's various third grade classes.

Each day during Ag Week, the various third grade classes in Manheim Central's eight elementary schools heard reports on raising rabbits, sheep, poultry, hogs or dairy cows. Like the Wengers, many of the presenters brought animals along for the students to see and touch.

According to Myer, the program was started by a teacher/farmer's wife in Illinois who saw the need for more agricultural awareness on the part of her non-farming students. The program subsequently came to be endorsed by the United States Department of Agriculture, and later by the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association.

The main purpose for the week, says Myer, is to show the students how agriculture impacts their lives. "It's a way of getting in the classroom and saying 'Agriculture is a big business' — it's not just a farmer out there doing his thing, it's something that affects (the students) directly."

Myer points out that as the population of the county grows, such programs become more and more relevant, as more and more people end up with farms in their backyards. Issues such as land use, food quality and respect for farming are becoming more pervasive all the time. The Lancaster Farmer's Association also provides teachers with support materials that help them prepare for the visit and for other independent lessons as well.

As April is the month in which most of the cultivating is done, it is typically a hard month in which to get farmers out of their fields — "When the sun shines, we're in the fields," says Myer. The program has proved so rewarding to farmers and students alike, however, that Myer usually has no trouble getting volunteers.

In fact the program seems to be a hit with everyone. "The teachers always seem pretty enthused. They usually want it back again (the next year), anyway."

And of course the kids like it too. "It's good for the kids," Myer adds. "The kids love the animals. You know how kids are with animals."

Penny Jordan Named York County Dairy Princess

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

BAIR (York Co.) — Penny Jordan was crowned the 1991 York County Dairy Princess during pageant ceremonies held last Saturday evening at the county 4-H Center.

Seventeen-year-old Penny is the daughter of Lois and Robert Jordan, Brogue R1 dairy farmers. She is a junior at Red Lion Area High School, sings with the school concert choir and is active with the youth group of Chanceford Presbyterian Church.

Sporting a cow costume complete with flowing tail, Penny performed an original rap music song she wrote on the dairy industry for her skit. When asked the "fishbowl" question on how a person finds success, Penny replied that she felt just doing the best job a person can and knows how to do is the answer to finding success.

The Jordan family milks a herd of 75 cows, of which Penny owns three. She helps with milking and feeding chores.

Annie Rauhauser was named the alternate county dairy princess. She is the daughter of Pat and Charles Rauhauser, 3161 Admire Road, Dover. A junior at Dover Area High School, Annie is president of the Central dairy club, a member of the 4-H county dairy judging team and shows cattle extensively.

A presentation on embryo transfers was Annie's presentation to the pageant audience. Her speech was in keeping with the new state princess seminar rules which require participants to prepare and present an adult-oriented talk for state training sessions.

Annie helps with milking the Rauhauser family's 100-head herd and handles calf feeding chores.

Penny Jordan

She owns 20 head of 4-H project and show cattle.

Two contestants were named dairy miss in what emcee Ralph McGregor announced as an "unbreakable tie." Matching crowns and banners went to Rebecca Kilgore and Michelle Walker, both eight-year-olds will help promote the dairy industry at selected events.

Rebecca is the daughter of Pam and Douglas Kilgore, Airville R2. A third-grader at Clearview Elementary School, she was a 4-H Clover Bud dairy exhibitor last year.

Michelle Walker is the daughter of Brenda and Leroy Walker, New Freedom R1. She is a Friendship Elementary School third-grader, and exhibited a dairy calf as a 4-H Clover Bud beginner last year.

The new first lady of York's dairy industry was crowned by outgoing princess Angie Lang. Just moments before placing the glittering tiara on her successor, Angie extended thanks to family, friends and the county promotion committee for support during her reign.

Special guests for the pageant program were six former dairy princesses, including Hope Hanley Bradley, York's first "dairy queen," selected in 1955. Also attending were Carol Bair Smeltzer, who reigned in 1958; Cindy Rutter Johnson, 1976; Carol Druck Tipton, 1979; Suzanne Hash, 1987; and Susan Eisenhart Wivell, 1988 and 1989.

Judges for the pageant were Adrienne Kaercher, Etters; and Duane and Donna Duncan, Shippensburg. Pageant entertainment featured the Penn Villians, a Hanover-area barbershop quartet.

Both Penny Jordan and Annie Rauhauser will represent York County at the state dairy princess training seminar, to be held during July. Penny will represent the county at the state dairy princess pageant in Harrisburg in late September.

Dairy and community groups interested in having the dairy princesses take part in their programs may contact county dairy promotion coordinator Sara Eisenhart, R1, Thomasville, PA 17364, phone 717-259-0908.

Penn State Dairy Princess Lori Benner, center, will be assisted in the college's dairy promotional events by alternates, Jaylene Yoder, left, and Jean Kummer.

Philip Snader stands on the porch of his boyhood home. Purchased by his great-great-great grandfather in February 1845, the farm operated as a dairy until 1979. Bricks for the home were fired on the site.

Farm Family Hitchin' Up Their Wagon For Roadside Marketing

SHARON B. SCHUSTER
Maryland Correspondent

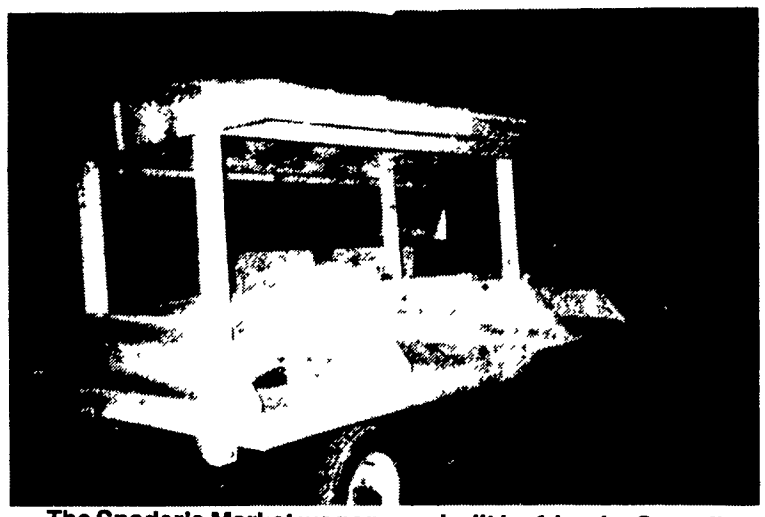
NEW WINDSOR, MD — Six generations of the Snader family in New Windsor have managed to hold on to the family farm for more than 100 years. And now, 25-year-old Philip H. Snader contin-ues the tradition.

Past generations of the Snader family were "gentlemen farmers," according to Philip. His grandfather and his great-grandfather, who was a Maryland senator, hired men to work the farm. It wasn't until more recent generations that the owners actually tilled the soil, as did Philip's parents, Richard and Trudy Snader.

"We managed to hold on to the land, but it was tough," explained Trudy. "We farmed the place for 17 years."

From the time of its purchase in 1845 until 1979, "Mattinsly" was operated as a dairy farm. In 1979, Richard and Trudy retired from dairying and moved into a nearby home built by Richard's maternal great-grandfather, Elhannon Englar.

Now, almost 150 years after Jacob Snader purchased the land, his great-great-great-grandson continues the farming tradition. Philip and his wife of one year, Edie Ann, are hitchin' up their wagon to a promising new venture. After several years of planning and planting, they will realize their dream in the form of a roadside market, complete with a market wagon loaded with fruits, vegetables and flowers.



The Snader's Market wagon was built by friends, Granville Grabill and Cucky Haines of New Windsor in just four days. It features a dozen removable compartments. A coat of red paint will finish the project.

"We had to find some way to make money on this farm," said Philip. "Back as a junior and senior in college, I had this crazy idea that I was going to raise field crops. I did that for two years and got quite a shock," he recalled. Traditional crop farming proved to be a a "barely - break - even" venture.

When Philip graduated from Delaware College, he bought home a degree in Agronomy and grand hopes of faming the 117 acres of the original farmstead that remain along with 100 plus acres on neighboring farms. He implemented conservation practices in 1984 which Philip credits with "improving the farm 100 percent." And he started an apple orchard on three acres by planting 750 trees.

In 1990, Philip Snader married his college sweetheart, Edie Ann, and she has become a full partner in the farming business. "As a business major, I said let's sit down and go through all the options," explained Edie. "The area's growing, that means more people. What's going to be in demand?," she asked.

After much brainstorming, the couple settled on a roadside market. They cited the growing population in Carroll County, and an increased demand for fresh fruits and vegetables grown locally, as the basis for their decision. They have determined that direct marketing of the farm's produce will be the key to making a profit.

Slated to open in June, Philip and Edie Ann will roll out their newly constructed market wagon, loaded with produce, along Route 31 just outside of New Windsor. Granville Grabill and Bucky Haines of New Windsor built the six-by sixteen-feet wagon with a dozen removable compartments in just four days. "We had a little sketch that they used to construct the wagon," explained Philip.

Under the shady canopies, the red market wagon will be laden with seasonal produce - everything from asparagus and apple butter to berries, cherries, corn, pumpkins and more. Approximately a half acre of the popular Jack-Be-Little pumpkins has been planted for the upcoming fall harvest. And the young orchard will soon be producing the Red and Golden delicious and Empire varieties, that Philip so prudently planted three years ago. "Eventually we would like to press our own cider, " he added.

Farm Family

Philip Snader is also taking measures to guard against excessive use of chemicals in the production of his produce. "Farmers have to do their part to cut down on pesticide and chemical use," he explained. Snader Farms is registered in the Integrated Pest Management program, a statewide program directed by Stanley Fultz. "Greg Stocksdale, our field scout, will take readings in the orchard and field corn and when he thinks the levels have reached the threshhold that affects quality and yield, he'll direct us to spray," explained Philip. The IPM program is "a very new and innovative program. We plan to put a sign on the wagon that states that we are under IPM," he added.

The wagon will also feature dried flowers. Trudy Snader grows many flowers at their beautifully landscaped home. Elegant and furnished with significant family heirlooms, the home has been featured on house and garden tours and is decorated with Trudy's wreaths and arrangements.

Edie Ann said that they are aiming for "quality not quantity. We want repeat business," she explained. "We're shooting for five percent of the cars that pass by here to stop." And just how much does five percent represent? Edie Ann and Philip estimate that 2,500 cars pass by their farm every day.

It has taken a great investment in time and money to see the project through to the point where they will be ready to open in June. Philip estimated that various preparations such as creating a stoned parking area, advertising, construction costs, planting, etc., represent about $10,000.

The Snaders regard their initial investment as money well spent. The market wagon will test the waters to see if the demand is indeed out there. And, if their hunch is right and they manage to attract those 125 cars on an average day to the roadside, then they will consider expanding their retail enterprise.

If all goes as they plan, the Snaders say they anticipate that Philip will eventually be able to work just on the farm. "Edie Ann will probably continue to work at her job." She is director of marketing and public relations with Glace, an environmental and consulting engineering firm. In order to make the commute to Camp Hill each day, Edie Ann rises at 4:30 a.m. The couple has decided to employ the help of students during the summer to help run their enterprise. They have set tentative hours at 8 to 8 daily, from June through November.

For now, they have a "flyer in the works." The Snaders are hopeful that their roadside retail market, which is the first of its kind in the western Carroll area, according to Philip, will be well received. For those who are in the market for fresh, locally raised produce and flowers, and are looking for bargains like the "baker's dozen," the Snader Farms roadside stand may just fill the bill.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

We've had quite a bit of rain recently and on a very rainy day I went on a wildflower hike. Only 18 of the 32 people who signed up for the tour of southern Lancaster County were brave enough to battle the elements. Despite the fact that we had to be protected by umbrellas all day, it was a delightful time.

We started in the morning in beautiful Shenk's Ferry Wildflower Glen which is preserved by Pa. Power and Light Company. The hillsides were blue with Virginia Bluebells. I was very interested to find that some of these plants and deep pink blossoms instead of pale blue ones. The hillsides on our farm are covered with Trout Lilies just now. However, one unhappy note was when I discovered that my camera was out of film as it only took 20 pictures instead of the usual 24.

We walked on the bed of an old rail line that formerly carried iron ore to an iron furnace. We were told that Indians used these same paths at one time.

Our lunch was eaten in a quaint country inn that still had Christmas lights strung around the room. It was comforting to get out of the rain and enjoy a cup of hot coffee.

In the afternoon we walked through Pequea Gorge with its huge rock formations and some of the same wildflowers. It was surprising to see the similarity between Dutchmen's Breeches and Squirrel Corn. The foliage and flower color are the same. Most of the 52 varieties that we identified were the same as those that grow on our farm in the woods and meadows. But the trilliums were new to me as we have none of these tall showy plants with their large white blossoms.

1991 BARN PAINTING
Aim For The Best - In Coating Film Thickness

To do it right use the finest kind of bristle brush evening out the coating into a film thickness that does not peel in normal moisture stress (found on most barn siding from outside and inside by livestock or stored animal feed)

1. PREPARATION. Peeling old coatings (improperly brushed) needs to be removed The best method is simply water blasting or power washing! High volume of water - medium pressure is best! Done professionally or do it yourself, especially on the easy to reach areas This is resurfacing!!!
2. BEST NEW START ON RESURFACED WOOD SIDING After spraying on this kind of barn paint or stain, take time to pay attention to brush out in all directions to create a film thickness that will prevent future peeling & resurfacing costs & effort This film will let excess moisture breathe through it Depending on the amount of weather wear it can be recoated lightly in 10-15 years Southern exposures usually wear faster

4-H HAPPENINGS

4-H Horse Festival

Do you like rodeos? Horses? Auctions? Antique Cars? Competition? Displays? Crafts? Chicken Barbecues?

Then don't miss the 1991 Horse Festival, Saturday, May 4, at 10 a.m. at the Cumberland County Fairgrounds, Carmel, N.J., presented by the Cumberland County 4-H Horse Club.

Chairpersons Mike and Nancy Spinelli have lined up many exciting attractions. These include the famous High School Rodeo, starting at 2 p.m.; the Mounted Drill Team competition at 10 a.m.; mounted drill demonstrations by Bergen County Mounted Police; Parade of Stallions at 12 p.m. and 4 p.m.; tack auction by Bo's; used tack sale; jackpot reining competition; horse consignment sale barn; free pony rides for kids; vendors; displays; equine fashion shows; antique cars; crafts; horse demonstrations; petting zoo; tractors; Adopt-A-Horse program; various speakers; and a food booth and a chicken barbecue at 3 p.m., sponsored by the Cumberland County 4-H Jr. Livestock Association. Admission through the gate is free and open to the whole family.

This event was the brainchild of the Cumberland County 4-H Horse Leaders' Association in an effort to provide equine information and education to area horsemen as well as 4-H members. This year marks the 4th year for the event.

For more information, contact Mike or Nancy Spinelli at (609) 696-6296 or Cyndy Hetzell at the 4-H Center, (609) 451-2800.

Rodeo Set

Cumberland County 4-H Horse Clubs are sponsoring a high school rodeo to be held Saturday, May 4, at 2 p.m. at the Cumberland County Fairgrounds in Carmel, N.J. in conjunction with the 1991 Horse Festival.

In this event, participants are students representing high schools in New Jersey, Pennsylvania, New York, Ohio, Delaware, Maryland, and Virginia. More than 100 high school riders take part in the rodeo circuit held in various areas around the Northeast.

Riders must maintain high grades to be eligible to participate and compete for various prizes, including college scholarships.

Many of the same events are included in the high school rodeo as in the famous Cowtown Rodeo. Some of those are bareback bronc riding, saddle bronc riding, team roping, break away roping, goat tie, pole bending and barrel racing to name a few, and the rodeo clown will play a prominent role as in any rodeo insuring the safety of the rodeo riders.

Rodeos originated back in the days when cattle and horses roamed the range. After a roundup, cowboys gathered to demonstrate their expertise of the skills they used to capture and control the stock. Although rodeos were a fun way for cowboys to let off steam, the skills they demonstrated were skills vital to a cowboy's job. It was important for him to know how to rope and ride and to have a horse with "cow sense" who knew how to cut and herd cows and steers. Today's rodeo helps keep those skills alive and demonstrates a piece of America's heritage.

Tickets bought in advance are $5 (adult); $3 (child) or $6 and $4 at the gate. They may be bought at Something Sweet Candy Store, Spinelli Bros., Bo's Tack, Hampton's John Deere, DJ Tack and the 4-H Center. The rodeo will be held rain or shine.

4-H Leadership Training

Adams County 4-H teen and adult leaders attended a special leadership training session recently at the National 4-H Center in Washington, D. C.

The session is sponsored by the Capital Region 4-H Program Committee. The design of the session is to provide teen and adult 4-H leaders an opportunity to share ideas, make new friends, tour the Kennedy Center for Performing Arts, the Archives, and have a cultural experience at a dinner theater.

The objectives include an opportunity for teens and adults to meet their peers to encourage retention in the 4-H program; learn at least one new idea; increase/improve interaction between teens and adults; see the National 4-H Center facilities and the New Pennsylvania Suite; and return home with a positive feeling about 4-H.

The 40-person delegation from Adams County includes Kara Cunningham, Gardners; Tina Powell, Gettysburg; Shelly Brodbeck, East Berlin; Tricia Powell, Gettysburg; Karen Millar, Gettysburg; Amy Cunningham, Biglerville; Amy Miller, New Oxford; Laura Cunningham, Biglerville; Sonja Smith, Gettysburg; Mary Beth Stahl, New Oxford; Angie Giardullo, York Springs; Toni Washburn, East Berlin; Laura Giardullo, York Springs; Michelle Brown, Gettysburg; Travis Green, Gettysburg; Mark Clowney, Gettysburg; Beau Ramsburg, Gettysburg; Bob Sterner, Gettysburg; Dan Ludwig, Gettysburg; Abe Bucher, New Oxford; Arlyn Meyers, Gettysburg; Mark Keller, York Springs; Jon Slothour, Aspers; Keith Cunningham, Gardners; Debbie Wilkinson, Gettysburg; Bertha Ludwig, York Springs; Teresa Murren, McSherrystown; Sharon Walker, Littlestown; Grace Toms, Littlestown; Carol Rex, Biglerville; Helen Rex, Biglerville; Ann Stahl, New Oxford; Joan Grim, Thomasville; Karol Sherman, Abbottstown; Kay Slothour, Aspers; Bob Bucher, New Oxford; Bev Millar, Gettyburg; Peggy Tyson, New Oxford; Darlene Resh, 4-H program assistant; and Jared Tyson, county 4-H agent.

4-H Honors Rotarians

The Warren Rotary Club members were honored for their nearly 30 years of support of the Warren County 4-H Achievement Program on April 22 during the 4-H leaders event.

4-H Development Council member Jeff Nordin and 4-H State Ambassador Chris Carlson of Warren presented Rotarian Dave Martin, president elect, and Max Knickerbocker with a clover plaque. The Rotary Club name is added to the Roll of Distinction plaques housed in the cooperative extension office.

The leader's event also included

Goat Club Meets

The Cumberland County 4-H Goat Club met on April 3 at Heather, Bobby, and Jamie Glennon's residence. There were nine members present.

Heather Glennon gave a report on the leadership conference that was held by the County Council. She said there were approximately 68 4-H members in attendance.

Project books were handed out to all members. Red Allen said that he will be going to 4-H members homes to tatoo their meat goats. Heather Glennon gave a demonstration on the proper methods of showing a goat. Also present was Robert Finkenbinder from the Country Butcher Shop who talked on selecting a meat goat.

The next meeting will be held at Joel Vanasdlen's residence on May 6 at 7 p.m. For more information about the goat club, contact the county extension office or one of the leaders, Red Allen (717) 776-5097, Suzie Leib (717) 697-5374, or Lois Zeigler (717) 776-7583.

Grow The Great Pumpkin

All kids between the ages of 8 and 19 are invited to join the 4-H great pumpkin contest.

W. Atlee Burpee and Co. has donated seeds of their exclusive hybrid pumpkin called Prizewinner to the Bucks County 4-H Program. 4-H members who enroll in the pumpkin project will be supplied with pumpkin plants and seeds and instruction on caring for pumpkin patches.

In October, members will show their pumpkins at the Bucks County 4-H pumpkin roundup. Prizes are awarded for the largest pumpkin, the most uniform pair, and the best carved face. There is also a pumpkin recipe contest and a pie eating contest.

4-H'ers will also be in the running for Burpee's grand prize of $10,000 if they grow the largest pumpkin in the United States.

To join the 4-H Pumpkin contest and project, youth must be enrolled as 4-H members. The deadline is May 24, 1991. Contact the Bucks County Extension office at (215) 345-3283 for information on joining 4-H in your local club or starting a 4-H club in your area.

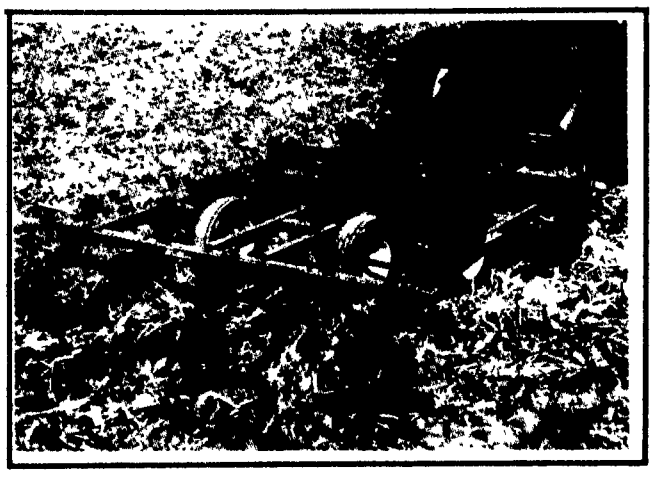
For Built In Strength Where It Counts - Buy Brillion

Brillion DEEP TILLS
penetrate the soil as deep as 18 inches to break up plow sole and hardpan.

Moisture from snow and rain is absorbed deep into the soil. Topsoil is left rough and a certain amount of residue remains to combat wind and erosion. Deep Tills are available in widths of 7'6" to 27'6" with optional coulters for cutting residue

Find out more about the value of deep tilling stop in and we'll talk.

Brillion SUPER SOIL BUILDERS



SUPER SOIL BUILDERS are a primary conservation tool that breaks up plow pan to absorb moisture and blends surface residue into the soil with enough residue left on top to control wind and water erosion

We have a size to fit your operation...stop in and we'll talk.

REAL ESTATE

401+ Acres of very desirable land in one tremendous tract. Consists of approx. 250 acres m/l of tillable farmland, the balance consists of some woodland and the rest of bottomland pasture with running stream of water. Both farmland and pasture have been lying fallow for several years. The large dwelling, bank barn and outbuildings are now in a state of disrepair. But this is a great parcel of land which, when you see it, will speak for itself. The new owners can redo the improvements to their own liking. The land is the main consideration with 401+ acres in one package.

The unique topography of this southern York County land gives beautiful vistas in several directions, one of which overlooks the Susquehanna River, which forms the eastern boundary of the farm. The Mason-Dixon Line forms the southern boundary, and Cooper Road forms approx. ¼ mi. of the western boundary. If you are in the market for a crop or cattle farm, wish to create a showplace, or desire a rural refuge surrounded by the white tail deer which abound, attend Open House and consider this farm.

Ed Seminars At World Pork Expo

DES MOINES, Iowa. — Pork producers attending World Pork Expo May 31-June 2 here at the Iowa State Fairgrounds will be able to attend a variety of educational seminars as well as receive answers to hog production questions at the "Ask The Expert" booth.

Educational seminars will be held all three days of the Expo in the cattle barn. Producers and consumers are encouraged to attend the seminars on the following topics:

• Artificial insemination. This live demonstration will help producers become more efficient and competitive by using artificial insemination techniques. (Sponsored by Swine Genetics International and International Boar Semen.)

•Hog facility remodeling. University agricultural engineers and a consultant will guide producers through the process of when and how to update their hog buildings. (Sponsored by "Successful Farming" magazine.)

• Finding and keeping managers and labor. An experienced recruiting professional will give producers tips on how to find the right employees and keep them. (Sponsored by AgriCareers.)

• Avoiding emergency rooms and court rooms — safety and liability issues. An agriculture safety specialist will explain how pork producers can make their operations a safer place to work. An attorney will share his insight on how producers can steer clear of the legal battles that sometimes surround production agriculture. (Sponsored by "National Hog Farmer" magazine.)

• Swine health in breeding and farrowing. Veterinarians and producers will discuss specific ways to ensure herd health during breeding and farrowing, which will increase producer efficiency. (Sponsored by Farm Progress Company/"The Hog Producer" magazine. They will also sponsor the official seminar program.)

• Swine respiratory health. Veterinarians and university personnel will explain ways producers can increase performance and profitability in their herds while fighting PRV. In addition, the speakers will discuss how production records and new technologies can be used to identify and control respiratory disease in herds. (Sponsored by SmithKline Beecham Animal Health.)

Also in the cattle barn, extension specialists will be operating the "Ask the Expert" booth. The extension specialists will be available to answer attendees questions at no charge in the areas of nutrition, genetics, swine health, housing, waste management, and reproduction.

Paper Recycling- Right Answer To The Wrong Question

How many trees do we save for every ton of recycled paper we use? Good question — one that a lot of people are asking these days. But like many good questions, this one is not easily answered.

For openers, just consider the enormous variety of tree sizes. Are you talking about "saving" a 300-year-old Douglas-fir tree, or a 20-year-old loblolly pine? The first could easily be 200 feet high and 6 feet in diameter. The latter is likely to be about 60 feet high and as wide as your waist. That's a big difference.

Another variable is the type of paper product you're talking about. Paper products vary greatly in the kind of wood fiber needed to make them. Products that demand durability and tear resistance usually require the longer and thinner wood fibers that come from pine, fir, and other softwood trees. Products that need density and printability require the shorter and thicker fibers from hardwood trees such as oak and maple. The kind of product you want influences the amount of so-called "virgin-fiber" needed to make it.

Even the question itself is driven by a more fundamental misunderstanding. Most people who are interested in "saving" trees by using more recycled paper mistakenly believe that the trees to be saved are the towering, picturesque ones commonly found in the great forests of the Pacific Northwest. In fact, these trees are not used to make paper, so they aren't "saved" when recycled material is used.

Instead, the trees typically used in papermaking are the small, pole-size trees. By removing these smaller or undesirable trees, it leaves space for other trees to grow to help insure a future supply of wood of all kinds. These are not the kind of trees that inspired Joyce Kilmer's poem to the woodsman.

Another misunderstanding may also be the root of the question. Many people believe that when paper products are recycled, no new wood fiber from living trees is used in the production process. Alas, the truth is less dramatic.

Eventually, even "recycled" paper products require new fiber. That's because with each use, paper fibers wear down during the manufacturing process, becoming smaller and less capable of binding together. For that reason, to sustain the process, it's necessary to inject a continuous infusion of never-before-recycled fiber into the wastepaper stream used to make recycled paper.

All of which isn't to suggest that recycling isn't a laudable goal. Far from it. In order to reduce the burden of waste material on the nation's landfills, paper industry officials believe recycling should be an important goal for both consumers and the paper industry.

In fact, paper producers have taken the lead in nationwide recycling efforts. Paper and paperboard today account for more than 80 percent of all post-consumer material that Americans collect for recycling. Already, the industry recovers about 27 million tons of waste paper annually to produce countless newspaper and paperboard products. Papermakers have recently announced a goal to recover up to 40 percent of all used paper by 1995-up from today's 32 percent.

Industry observers concede this goal is ambitious, particularly in view of the nation's enormous appetite for paper products of every description. Last year, each American used an average of 670 pounds of paper- not surprising when you consider a few facts. Americans usually read 24 billion newspapers and more than two billion catalogs. In 1989, we also used 312 billion square feet of corrugated containers (enough to cover the state of Maryland) to ship most of the country's packaged food, clothing, appliance, and industrial products.

Even though we don't know how many trees are used in each ton of paper, industry officials do know that the trees used in papermaking are used efficiently. For example, fully 30 percent of all the raw material used in papermaking comes from forest residues, and waste wood, not from standing trees. On the West Coast, where big trees flourish, the paper industry gets two-thirds of its fiber from wood chips. Add to that total another 25 percent derived from recycled waste paper, and less than half of the raw material used to make paper comes from standing trees.

For Best Results, Plant High-Profit Varieties

DEKALB, Ill. — Planting a high-yield soybean variety is one way to achieve profitable returns. But growers should also properly prepare for planting to guarantee success.

DEKALB Plant Genetics regional agronomist Jim Schwartz said growers should make management decisions such as setting yield goals for each field, determining tillage practices to avoid soil compaction, and planning timing and method of application of nutrient needs before planting.

He said that farmers should review their field notes from last year.

"It's important to select varieties by examining multiyear data," he said. "Use data that pertains to your area and contains varieties that are adapted to disease and insect problems common to your area."

Schwartz points out that by knowing which diseases and insects are likely to be a problem, growers can select a resistant or tolerant variety. Also, growers should select a soybean variety based on seed quality, yield, standability, and shattering resistance.

"When farmers have finalized their variety choices, they should buy new seed that is genetically and mechanically pure," Schwartz said. "The added cost of trustworthy seed is insignificant when compared to potential yield and profit loss from planting bin-run seed."

He suggests growers with high pH soils compare variety iron deficiency chlorosis scores and choose the more tolerant high performing varieties.

From the left, Chris Renner, executive loan officer with York Farm Credit, presents a plaque to Craig Walton, for his outstanding 4-H achievements.

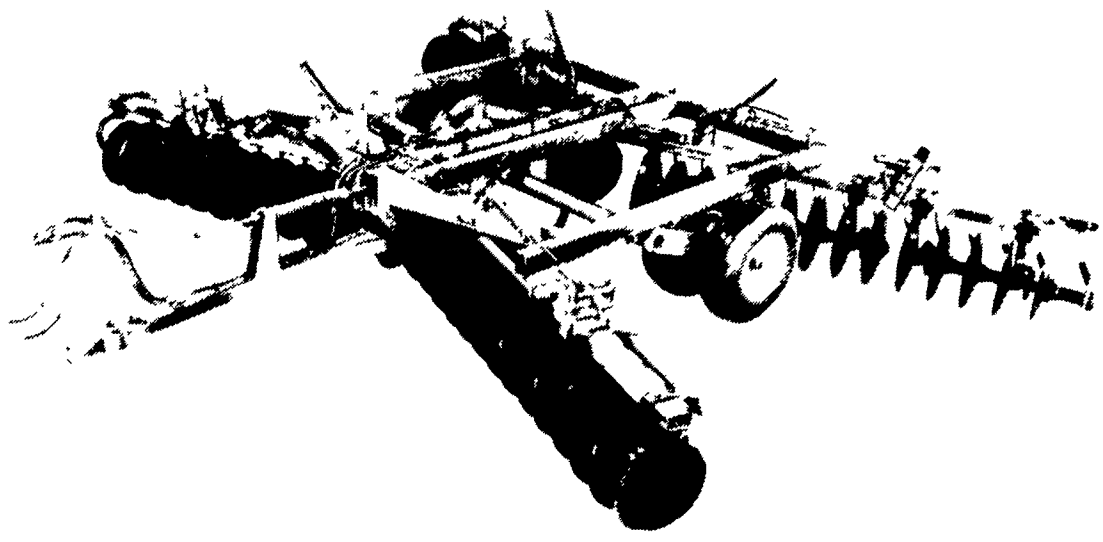
York Farm Credit Presents Award

YORK (York Co.) — Craig Walton, son of Dave and Kathy Walton, Carlisle, was named the 1990 Outstanding 4-H member at the 35th Annual Cumberland County Achievement Banquet. Chris Renner, executive loan officer for York Farm Credit, presented Craig with a plaque sponsored by the cooperative.

Craig received this plaque for his outstanding accomplishments in 4-H that included a 7-year membership in the Cumberland County Club. He has shown animals at the county and state levels, and has participated in both Dairy Judging and Dairy Bowl activities. He is currently county council representative for the county-wide dairy club.

York Farm Credit, ACA presently provides over $127 million in long, short and intermediate term loans to borrowers in south central Pennsylvania.

York Farm Credit, ACA is affiliated with the Farm Credit Bank of Baltimore, part of the nationwide Farm Credit System, the nation's leading agricultural lending institution. York Farm Credit, ACA serves farmers in Adams, Cumberland, Franklin, Fulton, Perry and York counties.



The Case International Model 3800 disk harrow is a tough, adaptable new entry in the mid-sized disk market. Sizes range from 9 to 21 feet with 7½ - or 9-inch blade spacing. Harrows over 17 feet have a folding frame.

Disk Harrows Have Improved Designs

RACINE, Wis. — With increased emphasis on residue management and precise chemical application, farmers today expect more adaptability and a higher standard of performance from their disk harrows. J I Case has introduced two new designs to meet these changing needs.

"We intend to set a new standard with the 3800 and 3900 disk harrows," said Joe Neville, product director for Case International tillage equipment. "These disk harrows do everything producers tell us they want a disk to do: penetrate, cut and mix residue, level the field with precision, incorporate fertilizer and chemicals evenly and provide years of trouble-free operation. In addition, the 3900 model flexes to follow ground contours while maintaining precise depth control over wider working widths."

Improved design begins at the heart of the gang for both models. The 3800 and 3900 disks are equipped with 1½ -inch round arbor bolts for strength and dependability. A self-leveling hitch that transfers weight between the tractor and harrow when the disk encounters uneven terrain is standard on both disks. Both models are available in a wide range of configurations to fit almost any condition or farming practice. Spring-cushion gangs can be ordered for fields with rocks, stumps or other obstacles.

Both models feature exclusive crimp-center, shallow-concavity blades made of Earth Metal®. Shallow concavity means less draft and more efficiency," Neville said. "Soil is fully cut across the implement, resulting in uniform soil and residue mixing with ideal chemical incorporation. The Earth Metal alloy makes the disks more durable than competitive models."

The Model 3800 disk harrow is a tough, adaptable new entry in the mid-sized disk market. Sizes range from 9 to 21 feet with 7½ - to 9-inch blade spacing. Harrows over 17 feet come in a folding frame.

"For finishing work and maximum incorporation of residues, chemicals and fertilizer, your dealer might suggest a 3800 with 20-inch blades spaced at 7½ inches," Neville said. "For deeper penetration and residue-cutting action, try 22-inch blades at 9-inch spacing."

The infinitely adjustable gang angles from 15 to 20 degrees and allows for fine-tuning of disk performance in any configuration.

The Model 3900 disk harrow is available in sizes from 19 feet 10 inches to 33 feet 7 inches. Rigid and spring-cushion gang assemblies offer the choice of 20-inch blades on 7½ -inch spacing or 22-inch blades on 9-inch spacing. In addition to the rigid and spring-cushion options, special 3900 HP models are available with additional operating weight and super-sharp 22-inch blades on 9-inch spacing.

"The HP models are for regions where the soil is a little tougher, but rock-free," Neville said. "Also, a soil mulcher attachment can be added for fine finishing. Fifteen-inch double-coil tines, made of 3/8-inch steel, offer exceptional clearance and agressive vibration, even through wet and high-residue conditions. The tine angle is adjustable to individual needs and conditions."

Fixed-angle gangs with an opposed-action frame design produce level fields and provide excellent mixing action. Front and rear gang angles are the same, so there is no overlap.

Wing wheels on the 3900 disk harrows have been designed with mechanical stops similar to the ones found on the main frame. This gives depth integrity to the entire implement and ensures even residue, chemical or fertilizer incorporation across the field.

Tractor Boasts 80 PTO HP

COMPTON, Calif. — Kubota Tractor Corporation recently added the 80 PTO horsepower, 4WD M8580 to its M-Series line of agricultural tractors.

Powered by a liquid-cooled, four-cylinder diesel engine, the M8580 uses a special heavy-duty clutch for greater durability.

The M8580's hefty hydraulic pump capacity of 29 gpm accommodates heavy duty loader operation. The high-performance front loader is marked by faster cycle times, large lift and breakout capacity, increased lifting height, a self-leveling and quick mounting bucket, and a standard joy stick. Increased hydraulic power flow to the 3-point hitch allows top performance of rear-attached implements.

Two different advanced transmission systems are available on the M8580, both designed for precision performance.

• The M8580 DTC Cab model features the IC (integrated circuit) shuttle transmission. This innovative transmission uses two hydraulic clutch packs, one for forward gears and another for reverse. A microcomputer regulates the hydraulic pressure to ensure the smoothest tractor movement possible. It also allows shifting between forward and reverse without clutching.

• The M8580 DT ROPS model offers the synchro-shuttle transmission for ultimate ease in shifting between forward and reverse. Twelve reverse speeds are matched by 12 forward speeds. With the synchro-shuttle transmission, directional changes can be made even before the tractor comes to a complete halt.

Small turning radius, high crop clearance, and wide tread are also features of the M8580. In addition, an optional creep speed is offered for mowing, seeding, spraying, or any job requiring slow, constant speeds.

Operator comfort is enhanced by features such as hydrostatic power steering, full-floating flat deck, tilt steering, and a deluxe seat.

For more information, contact Kubota Tractor Corporation, 550 West Artesia Boulevard, Compton, CA 90220.

Corn: High Energy For Livestock

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN. — Corn is the most popular forage used for silage. Compared to other forages used for silage, corn produces more energy per acre, so it is a high energy source of feed for livestock.

Corn produces good silage because it contains sufficient fermentable carbohydrates to produce lactic acid necessary to preserve the silage.

A quality corn silage is silage that ferments and preserves itself with few nutrients lost in the ensiling process.

There are several important requirements for attaining a quality corn silage. These include the plant maturity, moisture content, and chopping length of the forage. The techniques for ensiling the corn and the structures in which the silage is stored determine the quality of fermentation and, in turn, the quality of the silage.

Maturity

It is important to harvest corn at the proper maturity so a maximum yield and nutrient content are achieved. The "black layer stage" test can be used to accurately determine the optimum time to harvest corn for silage.

The kernels of the corn turn black near the tip and the lower four to six leaves of the plant are brown as it becomes physiologically mature and ready for the silo. The corn plant contains 60-67 percent moisture at this stage.

Moisture Content

The moisture of the corn is probably the most important factor affecting silage quality. Corn silage, when stored at too high a moisture level, can cause seepage and is usually responsible for up to a 10 percent loss in dry matter and energy. A high moisture content dilutes the concentration of the plant sugars so that unfavorable fermentation is more likely to occur. Poor animal performance on high moisture silage is usually traced back to unfavorable fermentation.

Forage which has too high a dry matter content cannot ferment

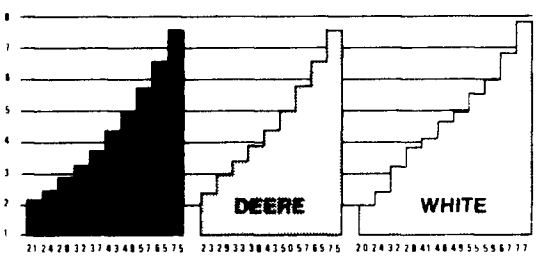
The Evolution of the New Workhorse

It has been said that if you don't make dust, you eat it. The new Workhorse from White is an evolution of dust-raising power and rugged dependability. The competition has some catching up to do.



The Workhorse Power Team

Workhorse couples the power of the Cummins Diesel Engine with our field-proven 18-speed transmission with 3 speed Powershift. This Power Team produces a whooping 42% increase in torque measured at the drive wheels of the 170 and 195 models. At base shipping weight, the Workhorse 145 will pull a higher percentage of weight without adding extra cast iron. That minimizes soil compaction. Plus, it delivers nearly 10% greater fuel efficiency than other tractors in its class. That means you can save as much as 1 gallon of fuel per hour.

The Transmission That's Faster in the Field

With a new Workhorse you can work faster and more efficiently because it delivers up to ⅓ more speeds than the competition in the 3.8 to 7.7 mph range. That is where the field work is done.

By traveling just ⅓ mph faster pulling a 12 row planter, you can cover as much as 9 additional acres in a 10 hour day.

Corn: High Energy

properly and is prone to excessive heating. A higher dry matter content, however, concentrates the fermentable carbohydrates and reduces the amount of seepage high moisture silages often produce. Low moisture silage (40-60 percent) can successfully be preserved in oxygen-limiting silos or silos which are sealed airtight.

A moisture level of 60-67 percent is best for storing corn silage. The forage packs better which reduces the amount of oxygen and prevents unfavorable fermentation. The corn is at its highest nutrient level and contains an adequate amount of fermentable carbohydrates to produce the lactic acid necessary to preserve the silage.

Chopping Length Of Forage

The shorter the forage is chopped, the greater the compaction of the silage. A highly compacted silage reduces the amount of oxygen and favorable fermentation will be the result. The fermentation quality is also increased due to the release of plant sugars from fine chopping.

Corn plants should be chopped 3/8 to 1/2 inches in length. Low moisture corn should be chopped more finely to permit a thorough packing and decrease the amount of oxygen in the silage.

Packing and Filling The Silo

The corn should be harvested, chopped, and packed in the silo in the shortest possible time. This reduces the amount of oxygen available in the silage and encourages favorable fermentation. The less time it takes to fill and pack the silo, the smaller the amount of nutrients, that will be lost. An airtight seal should be placed over the top of the silage after the silo is filled.

Storage Structure

The type of silo affects both silage quality and amount of crop nutrients preserved. A solid, well-constructed, properly managed silo is essential if storage losses are to be kept to a minimum.

There are two main types of silos — upright and horizontal. Each type has its advantages and disadvantages depending on its quality and environment.

Upright silos are popular in the eastern and midwestern parts of the United States. These cylindrical silos are from 16-30 feet in diameter and 30-80 feet high. While upright silos may be the most expensive structure to store silage, the losses are much less than that of a horizontal silo.

Horizontal silos, such as the stack, trench, or bunker are not as expensive to build as the upright silos but spoilage losses are much greater. Due to the large surface area exposed in horizontal silos, sealing the silage so that it is airtight is important. The silage should be tightly packed and covered with plastic so that spoilage losses are kept to a minimum. If sealed properly, loss of silage in horizontal silos is greatly reduced.

Use LSA And Liqui-Teem To Increase The Silage Quality

By harvesting the corn at the optimum maturity, moisture content, chopping to the appropriate length and packing the silo so that no oxygen exists, a high energy silage should be produced.

To improve the efficiency of the fermentation and preserve even higher levels of nutrients, use Liqui-Teem™ Fermentation Aid. Liqui-Teem provides high levels of lactic acid producing bacteria necessary for rapid fermentation.

To improve the protein level of corn silage, add LSA® Liquid Silage Additive. With higher protein levels and high energy levels, LSA-treated corn silage is an excellent feed for your cattle that will save you monev

To achieve the maximum preservation of crops as silage requires all of the following:

- The proper moisture.
- An adequate amount of fermentable carbohydrates (sugar).
- High levels of lactic acid producing bacteria.
- Low buffer capacity of the crop.
- Rapid fermentation.
- The ability to achieve and maintain anaerobic conditions in the silo.

The primary goal of storing alfalfa as silage is to preserve the material with a minimum loss of nutrients so that the producer obtains good quality silage and maximum return from the crop. Alfalfa is difficult to ensile because it is:

- Low in fermentable carbohydrates.
- Has a low lactic acid bacteria population.
- Has a high buffer capacity, and
- Ferments slowly.

The minimum amount of sugars necessary to obtain a properly preserved alfalfa silage is 6-7 percent of dry matter. Not only is alfalfa naturally low in fermentable carbohydrates, the amount varies greatly depending on the maturity, environment and time of day it is cut.

Plants will grow and mature more rapidly with increasing temperature, but sugar concentrations will be lower at the same stage of maturity. Environmental temperature has a strong effect on the late fall cuttings. Sugars increase from September to the end of October with the percent dropping thereafter. Wilting also results in a loss of sugar.

UNUSUAL OIL SEED GRAINS FOR SWINE

The government recently approved several oil seed grains for planting on "flex acres" or "conservancy-use acres for payment."

Farmers often refer to this acreage as "set-aside." The oil seeds include sunflower, safflower, canola, rape seed, mustard, and flax.

These grains are seldom planted in Pennsylvania, but a number of swine producers are considering their use. Here is brief review of how these ingredients might be used in a swine diet.

Canola/Rapeseed

Canola is the primary oilseed crop grown in Canada. The grain contains 24.9 percent protein, 1.94 percent lysine, 38 percent oil (double the oil content of soybeans), and 9 percent fiber.

Current canola varieties originated from old rapeseed varieties which contained high levels of undesirable compounds — erucic acid and glucosinolates. The glucosinolates become toxic in the presence of an enzyme called myrosinase (contained in rapeseed).

In Canada, the new varieties must contain less than 2 percent erucic acid and less than 3 mg of glucosinolates per gram of oil or meal to be classified as canola.

Pigs perform well if diets contain a limited amount of canola. For example, a trial conducted at the University of Alberta showed that starter-pigs consuming a diet containing 300 pounds of canola per ton of feed performed as well as pigs consuming a corn-soy diet Increasing the canola to 600 pounds per ton decreased growth rate and feed intake by 17-20 percent.

A second study, also conducted in Canada, showed that finishing pigs grew normally when eating feed containing 300 pounds canola per ton. At an inclusion level of 400 pounds per ton of feed, performance was depressed by roughly 6 percent.

However, a trial at the University of Kentucky demonstrated that growth rate and feed intake are limited (about 10 percent) with as little as 240 pounds of canola included per ton.

If you decide to use canola, a safe maximum would be 200 pounds per ton. If pigs perform satisfactorily, you could try increasing the level to 300 pounds, but the high oil content of the canola will likely increase carcass fat and decrease carcass firmness.

For every 100 pounds of canola added per ton, remove 41 pounds of corn and 59 pounds of soybean meal (48 percent). Using this substitution rule and including no more than 200 pounds canola per ton of feed, we can estimate the value of canola seed.

For example, 41 pounds of corn (at $2.90/bu) and 59 pounds of soybean meal (at $210/ton) would cost $8.31. So 100 pounds of canola would be worth no more than $8.32.

Sunflower Seeds

Sunflower seeds contain 18.8 percent crude protein, 0.59 percent lysine, 42 percent oil, and 15 percent fiber. Because of the low digestibility of the hull and high fiber level, sunflower seeds are less valuable for swine diets than canola.

The results of two trials were reported five years ago by Kansas State University. Growth rate and feed intake were normal in pigs consuming diets containing up to 200 pounds sunflower seed per ton.

Higher levels will decrease growth performance. And like canola, the high oil content can result in soft carcasses that contain more fat than normal.

Use a maximum of 200 pounds per ton. For every 100 pounds of sunflower seeds added per ton, remove 88 pounds of corn and 12 pounds soybean meal (48 percent). At today's market for corn ($2.90/bu) and soybean meal ($210/ton), 100 pounds of sunflower seeds in a swine diet would be worth no more than $5.80.

Safflower Seeds

Safflower seeds contain 19.5 percent crude protein, 0.60 percent lysine, and 32 percent oil. The hull constitutes about 40 percent of the seed, leading to a crude fiber level of 31 percent.

I was not able to find any research using safflower seeds. But safflower meal, which has the oil and most of the fiber removed, depresses performance at levels exceeding 200 pounds per ton. So the seeds are not really practical for the growing finishing hog.

You might consider using the seed for sows in gestation. Use the same substitution rule as that listed for sunflower seeds — remove 88 pounds of corn and 12 pounds soybean meal (48 percent) for every 100 pounds of sunflower seeds added per ton.

Flaxseed

Flaxseed is used in the production of linseed meal. Flaxseed contains 25.6 percent crude protein, 38 percent oil, and 6.7 percent fiber.

I'm not aware of any experiments which compare performance of hogs consuming a corn-flaxseed diet vs. a corn-soybean meal diet. When linseed meal was a popular protein supplement for hogs, it had to be mixed with animal by-products (meat and bone meal, fish meal, or skim milk) to achieve satisfactory performance.

Linseed meal is relatively palatable, so it stands to reason that flaxseed would be as well. However, you can expect a slight laxative effect with flaxseed and the oil can contribute to decreases in carcass quality.

If you use flaxseed, use the same substitution rule as that for sunflower and safflower (remove 88 pounds of corn and 12 pounds soybean meal — 48 percent — for every 100 pounds of sunflower seeds added per ton) as a starting point. And like the other oilseeds, 200 pounds per ton would be a reasonable maximum.

Mustard Seed

No information is available using mustard seed as a feed ingredient.

Summary

1. When considering any new and unusual protein source for pigs, remember that soybean meal is the standard of comparison. At best, performance of pigs consuming diets containing these ingredients will be as good, but no better than that of corn-soybean meal diets.

2. For the oilseeds that we have discussed, 200 pounds per ton should be the maximum level. More than this could impair growth performance and reduce carcass quality.

3. At today's market for corn and soybean meal, canola is worth roughly $8.30/cwt. Sunflower, safflower, and flaxseed, at best, would be worth about $5.80/cwt. To even consider planting these grains with the intention of feeding them to hogs, you should be fairly certain that you can grow them for significantly less than these dollar figures.

Corn: High Energy

Research studies have shown that the addition of sugar and lactic acid bacteria to alfalfa at ensiling result in a more rapid drop in pH and a lower pH necessary to stop proteolysis (breakdown of protein). It also increased the rate and amount of lactic acid produced.

To compensate for the low levels of fermentable carbohydrates and lactic acid producing bacteria in alfalfa, LHA Liquid Haylage Additive should be used in conjunction with Liqui-Teem Fermentation Aid.

LHA Liquid Haylage Additive provides readily fermentable carbohydrates to:

- Improve fermentation.
- Feed bacteria.
- Conserve nutrients.
- Improve palatability.
- Add energy.
- Promote feed consumption.
- Enhance bunk life.
- Conserve dry matter.

Liqui-Teem Fermentation Aid provides the proper type and numbers of lactic acid producing bacteria to:

- Ensure a rapid, efficient fermentation.
- Improve preservation.
- Achieve proper pH.
- Improve palatability.

Know Atrazine Content When Using Premixed Herbicides

RALEIGH, N.C.— Atrazine and corn growing are two things that for many farmers go together like strawberries and cream or salt and pepper.

But recently there have been increasing concerns about the potential for atrazine to contaminate groundwater, along with continuing worries about carryover damage to rotational crops, especially soybeans.

Tougher restrictions on atrazine use have been adopted by the U.S. EPA and by several states. University recommendations have been modified to reflect new attitudes about atrazine. As a result, corn growers are changing the way they use the product.

Despite the trend, however, more farmers than ever are using atrazine, but using less of it. They are applying lower rates per acre in carefully-managed herbicide programs. Many are switching to premixed herbicides containing atrazine, instead of "straight" atrazine applied alone or mixed with another product.

The benefits of a premix are several. Handling and mixing are more convenient, since the user has only one product to deal with. Storage space often is reduced. And the economics are attractive, since manufacturers usually price premixed products the same or slightly higher than buying components separately.

With premixes, however, it can sometimes be difficult to determine exactly how much atrazine you're applying. With one exception (BUCTRIL® + atrazine) product names don't even mention atrazine. Therefore, it's important to know how to decipher atrazine content from the product label specifications.

The tables here list actual atrazine applied in pounds of active ingredient per acre for major preemergence and postemergence premixes that contain atrazine. For products or rates not listed here, you can calculate the amount of atrazine applied by using this procedure. Remember, you want to know the pounds (or fractions of a pound) of active ingredient of atrazine applied per acre.

Determining Atrazine Content: Liquid Products

Refer to the label. Listed just below the product name are the ingredients and percentage of each herbicide. Also noted is the amount of atrazine, given in pounds per gallon.

Next, determine your application rate in gallons per acre. Since most herbicide recommendations are given in quarts or pints, you will have to divide the number of pints or quarts by the number of that unit (eight or four) in a gallon.

The next step is simply to multiply the atrazine content by the application rate (in gallons or parts of a gallon) to find how much actual atrazine you will be applying per acre.

Example 1: Product contains 2.1 pounds of atrazine per gallon. You plan to apply three pints per acre.

Application rate: 3 (pints) divided by 8 (pints per gallon) = .375 gallons/acre

Atrazine content: 0.375 x 2.1 (pounds atrazine/gallon) = 0.78 pound per acre

In this example, using a product containing 2.1 pounds of atrazine per gallon at a three pint rate would result in applying 0.78 pound of atrazine per acre.

Determining Atrazine Content: Wettable Powder or Dry-Flowable Products

With wettable powder and dry flowable herbicides, you first must determine the amount of atrazine by weight of the product. This information is found on the product label, just below the name of the product. Then determine the application rate you'll be using in pounds per acre.

To find the amount of atrazine you'll be applying per acre, simply multiply the pounds per acre by the percentage of atrazine in the product. Be sure to convert the percentage to a decimal.

Example 2: Product contains 21 percent atrazine. You are applying 2.2 pounds per acre.

0.21 (percent atrazine content) x 2.2 (application rate) = 0.46 pound atrazine.

In this example, the 2.2 pound rate would result in .46 pound of atrazine being applied per acre.

Company Plants 100 Million Seedlings

SPRING GROVE (York Co.) — For decades, The Glatfelter Pulp Wood Company, the forestry subsidiary of the P. H. Glatfelter Company, has planted tree seedlings on company-owned property in Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware, and Virginia as part of a sound forestry management program.

At the same time, the company has encouraged many private landowners in those same states to practice good forestry by providing technical assistance and offering free tree seedlings through the company's matching seedling program.

Through the company's reforestation efforts, more than 120,000 acres of timber have been planted in the four-state area. In addition to producing the raw material for important wood products, these lands have served as recreational sites, wildlife habitats, and protection for watershed area.

This spring, the company will celebrate the planting of 100 million seedlings over many years on company and privately-owned lands. The 100 millionth seedling will be planted in one of the four states in which the company operates.

NCGA Applauds Starch-Based Utensil Study

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — The National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) said it "applauds McDonald's" for its consideration of starch-based eating utensils.

NCGA, with more than 25,000 members in 45 states, is a leader in promoting new uses for corn products. It has actively worked on behalf of corn starch-based biodegradable plastics.

Pete Wenstrand, a corn grower from Iowa and NCGA's vice president of market development, said the announcement by McDonald's that it is looking into replacing the plastic forks, spoons, and knives with starch-based cutlery that can be composted is encouraging.

"It reflects a willingness on the part of both the company and the Environmental Defense Fund (EDF) to consider the benefits of starch-based biodegradable plastics for composting," Wenstrand said. He noted that NCGA has been a leader in urging greater use of corn-starch based biodegradable products in a growing number of applications.

"This is evidence of the continuing potential of renewable resources such as corn in helping solve a number of environmental problems," he said. "NCGA congratulates McDonald's for its leadership."

"In the last two years we put in alfalfa with a nurse crop of spring triticale and field peas. The Aer-Way and flexible chain harrow were the only tillage used The alfalfa seedlings are the best we've ever had."

RICK & KATHIE ARNOLD
Twin Oaks Farm
Truxton, New York

"My dairy farm is located on rolling terrain in Reedsburg, Wisconsin. After the first cutting, I used the Aer-Way on my thinning alfalfa stand to get the fertilizer and water into the ground. The second cutting was noticeably better with thicker and leafier alfalfa. I would recommend the Aer-Way to other dairy farmers."

DAVID RABOINE
Dairy Farmer
Reedsburg, Wisconsin

"I have better pastures since I started using the Aer-Way to aerate and renovate my pastures. Using the Aer-Way has helped me get the nutrients where they are needed. I would not recommend fertilizing or liming without running the Aer-Way first.

York Countians Should Check Water

YORK (York Co.) — Is your drinking water safe? Maybe not, especially if you have your own well.

Data from previous York County tests show that 14 percent of private wells are contaminated with bacteria and 14 percent are above standards for nitrate.

Find out for sure what's in your water. Participate in Cooperative Extension's Educational Water Testing Program and get your testing done at reduced rates. Water testing can cost less than a trip to the doctor.

Who needs to test their water supply? Every household drawing water from their own well. If you don't test your own water, no one else will either.

You should test your water once a year and any time repair work is done on your well or pump. Testing is especially important if there has been earth disturbance near your home or you live in an area prone to sinkholes.

If you have a disinfection unit, you may want to consider testing the treated water to be sure that the equipment is working.

Three groups of tests will be provided this year. Group one is a bare minimum test that includes coliform bacteria and nitrate. Group two is a recommended set of tests for coliform bacteria, nitrate, lead, pH, and total dissolved solids. Group three is a recommended series of tests to be done once every three years or so. It includes coliform bacteria, nitrate, lead, pH, total dissolved solids, chloride, and sulfate.

Coliform bacteria indicates the potential presence of disease-causing organisms. They originate from soil, sewage, or manure. Nitrate is of concern when infants under six months drink the water. Nitrate enters the groundwater from heavily fertilized areas such as farm fields, home lawns, or septic systems.

Lead at high levels in the blood affects nerves, kidneys, and the brain. Children absorb more of the lead in their diet than adults do. Lead comes primarily from solder joints in copper pipe. pH measures the acidity of the water and is a measure of the tendency of water to corrode plumbing.

Total dissolved solids is useful for keeping track of the overall quality of the water. It is related to hardness, taste, and corrosion tendencies. Chloride is also related to long-term changes in quality. Sources include highway runoff, sewage, and manure. Sulfate can affect the taste and odor of water.

Test kits can be purchased at the York County Cooperative Extension Office during the week of May 6-10 between 8 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. Water samples will need to be returned by noon on May 14.

For more information, contact the extension office at 112 Pleasant Acres Road, York, PA 17402, (717) 757-9657.

Penn State Offers Mushroom Short Course

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Attention mushroom growers, marketers and scientists: here is your opportunity to learn about the current issues and research on Agaricus and specialty mushrooms at Penn State's 33rd annual Mushroom Industry Short Course and second annual Specialty Mushroom Workshop.

"This year we are featuring speakers from Israel, Germany, Canada, Switzerland and Australia, demonstrating the globalization of mushroom growing, mushroom science, and mushroom marketing," said Dr. Paul Wuest, professor of plant pathology and chairman of the short course planning committee. "In addition, topics of the short course will reflect environmental protection and food safety, concerns that are foremost in the minds of growers."

The short course, which deals with the Agaricus mushroom, will take place on June 10, 11, and 12. The specialty mushroom workshop will take place all day on June 12. Both are in the J.O. Keller Conference Center on Penn State's University Park Campus.

The two events cover different mushroom production systems and marketing, and are scheduled so that visitors can attend both.

On Monday morning, June 10, the short course will begin with tours of the Penn State mushroom facilities and a wetland constructed with spent compost. The afternoon will feature presentations on topics including automated grading, using newspaper as casing, and the future of mushroom growing.

Commercial exhibits will be open on Monday and Tuesday, June 10 and 11, and visitors may attend presentations on controlling insects and other diseases, composting, and using alternate casing materials. On June 12, demonstrations and tours of the mushroom facilities again are available, or visitors may attend the all-day specialty mushroom workshop.

The specialty workshop will cover research, production, and marketing of mushrooms such as Shiitake, Pleurotus, and Enoki. Some of the topics in the workshop will be the nutritional and medicinal value of specialty mushrooms, growing Shiitake mushrooms on natural logs, performance of specialty mushroom germplasm in substrate, production and diseases of Pleurotus mushrooms, and solving problems associated with specialty mushrooms. Many of those attending the short course also enrolled in the specialty mushroom workshop last year.

"Last year's workshop exceeded all expectations, and the consensus was to offer it annually," said Dr. Daniel Royse, associate professor of plant pathology and chairman of the workshop planning committee. "This year, we have invited a diverse group of experienced speakers and panelists, and time has been set aside after each presentation for questions and discussions with panel members."

Registration fees are $100 for the short course and $85 for the workshop. Those interested may register any time up to and including the days of the events.

For more information or to preregister, contact the Mushroom Industry Short Course or the Specialty Mushroom Workshop, The Pennsylvania State University, 306 Ag Administration Building, University Park, PA 16802, (814) 865-8301.

Wayne Countians Learn About Drinking Water Quality

HONESDALE (Wayne Co.) — More than 100 local residents concerned about the quality of their water had it tested as part of the Penn State Cooperative Extension water quality clinic program.

The clinic, held April 8, featured Dr. William Sharpe, water resource specialist, and Brian Swisstock, water quality expert, both from Penn State.

Approximately 100 people attended the afternoon or evening sessions held in the extension meeting room of the Wayne County Courthouse.

The program, aimed at individuals with private wells or springs, stressed the need for testing these private water supplies. Sharpe told the group, "The quality of water from a private supply is the responsibility of its owner. If you don't test your water, no one else will."

He also recommended that water be tested for bacteria and nitrates at least once a year and for other chemicals at least every three years.

You should also have your water tested if you have drilled a second well or changed the pump or plumbing. Additionally, you should test your water if you note a change in the appearance, taste, or odor of the water.

The quality of spring water supplies changes much more than that of well water supplies. Its quality is affected by changes in temperature, amount of rainfall and runoff, and the activity in the watershed.

Spring water should be tested more often. Sharpe indicated that two-thirds or 66 percent of the springs tested in northeastern Pennsylvania have tested positive for bacterial contamination.

Brian Swisstock discussed the safety of roadside springs. He pointed out to the audience that springs should not be considered safe to drink from unless they have been tested. He also discussed how contamination of water supplies may occur and what we can do to protect the quality and safety of our water.

Drinking contaminated water can pose health risks, especially to young children. Water with high levels of lead can lower the IQ of children who drink it. Besides the potential health problems of digestive upset, etc., poor quality water can have other negative effects. For example, "Water contaminated with iron can stain laundry and bathroom fixtures, and taste bad," said Sharpe.

Penn State Cooperative Extension has several water quality fact sheets and the publication, "Safeguarding Wells and Springs From Bacterial Contamination," available at the extension office.

SMALL INCUBATORS AND CHICK HATCHERS IN THE SCHOOL CLASSROOM

Herbert C. Jordan
Associate Professor of Poultry Science

Across Pennsylvania, more than 1,000 small incubators are active in several hundred schools incubating embryos and hatching chicks. Most of these are in elementary school classrooms.

Only 41,236 4-H members are enrolled in 4-H embryology in Pennsylvania. Many students incubating eggs in school are not in 4-H. Fertile white chicken eggs are most commonly used; however, some children set pink, blue, green, or brown shelled chicken eggs.

In other schools, pheasant, quail, chukar, or duck eggs are hatched. Ask your county extension personnel for a copy of a book, "From Egg to Chick" to find out how to hatch eggs from each species.

The goal is to hatch 100 percent healthy chicks from all fertile eggs. If the goal is not reached, consider improving incubation as follows:

- Select and set only fresh eggs with normal, clean shells from a healthy breeder flock. Never store eggs more than seven days prior to setting. Store eggs at 60 degrees F and 75 percent relative humidity and turn eggs 5 or 7 times a day.
- If eggs are dirty, do not set them; instead, clean the shell with a cloth soaked with 120 degrees F water with 10 drops of chlorine bleach (Chlorox-TM) per quart and do not immerse eggs in water. Allow bleach water to dry on shell and then set cleansed eggs.
- If chicks hatch late, not at all or are tired, weak and not vigorous, try one of these suggestions: 1) Allow incubator to run and prove it will work and hold a constant temperature before you set eggs. Change thermostat if temperature varies more than one degree above or below desired temperature. Widely varying temperature can cause weak or dead embryos. 2) While incubating, eggs should be turned seven times a day, every day and stop turning eggs three days before expected hatch. This exercise of alternating egg position to gravity flow in egg turning makes a strong heart and respiratory system because gravity opposes blood flow. 3) Keep relative humidity in incubator at 58-62 percent during incubation and 73-80 percent during hatching. 4) Allow a little fresh air into the incubator the first day, then more later. Fresh air can be too much or too little, so learn the art of ventilating the incubator and hatcher. 5) Break open all unhatched eggs and examine for possible incubator failure, as follows: (1) Large air cell and dry chick means relative humidity is too low. (2) Small air cell and wet chick means humidity is too high. (3) Dark yolk sac with repulsive odor usually means it is contaminated with microbes. 4) Unabsorbed yolk sac hanging out of navel requires further study — it may be caused by inadequate breeder flock management, incubator malfunction, or contaminated yolk sac from setting dirty eggs. (5) Microbial contamination of the entire egg contents may mean the normal defense mechanisms against harmful microbes in the egg or embryo are failing. It may also mean the embryo was contaminated by a parent or through manure on the shell.

For further information, call your 4-H agent or county extension service.

POST CALVING NUTRITIONAL NEEDS

Nutrient requirements for cows peak between calving and rebreeding, making that stage the most critical in the reproductive cycle.

The average cow needs 40 percent more energy and 60 percent more protein and minerals at this time compared to the dry period. The extra energy is necessary to produce adequate milk for the calf, to get the cow's reproductive tract in shape for rebreeding, and to meet maintenance requirements.

Cows lose about 120 to 140 pounds at calving, but with proper nutrition will regain part of this weight in the following 60 to 80 days.

Inadequate nutrition after calving will result in lower first-service conception rates and fewer cows cycling during the breeding season. This leads to a longer calving season and possible milk-production and calf-growth problems. If cows do not appear to be gaining well on grass alone, begin a supplementation program consisting of protein, minerals, and vitamins.

According to a "Drover's Journal" article, a sample menu for an 1,100-pound cow in the 80 days post-calving would be 13 to 14 pounds of TDN, 2.3 pounds of crude protein, 0.07 pounds of calcium, 0.06 pounds of phosphorous, and 39,000 I.U. of vitamin A. Improper feeding of the cow herd can result in lowered weaning weights in this year's calf crop and undernourished, underweight calves in next year's calf crop.

Declining Hide Market

Poor demand worldwide has caused a 15 percent decline in hide and offal values this year. The impact on cash fed-cattle prices has been minimal, but prolonged weakness will pressure prices, especially as cattle supplies increase this summer.

The decline in the hide and offal market can be attributed to several factors, including the reduction in Japanese buying and the chaos in the eastern European market. Recession in the United States and internationally has also caused a decline in shoe sales, which account for 60 percent of all leather produced.

Hides represent about two-thirds of the value of the drop-credit, or by-product value, which usually accounts for much of a packer's margin on slaughter and processing. Steer hides have fallen more than $2 per hundredweight during the past year, and hide traders expect hard times to continue. Exports to Europe have stopped, and hide dealers claim to have difficulties obtaining payments from the Soviet Union and eastern European Countries. Additionally, two big Italian tanneries have gone out of business.

American hide dealers are also struggling to remain afloat, and few expect the market to rally significantly, given the recession and eastern Europe's problems. Lower demand for hides will continue to pressure overall packer margins and eventually will be reflected in bids on fed cattle.

Rodent Control In Swine Facilities

Rats and mice can be a major economic threat around swine facilities. They consume and contaminate feed and cause feed losses through the gnawing of holes in feed sacks and wooden bins. They may also be responsible for maintaining or spreading swine diseases.

House mice, Norway rats, and roof rats as a group are considered the most troublesome and economically important rodents in the United States. Norway rats will undermine building foundations and concrete slabs.

Roof rats and house mice, in addition to Norway rats, are particularly destructive to building insulation. Most common types of insulation including rigid foam and fiberglass are susceptible to rodent damage. A rodent infestation can damage structures by thousands of dollars in a matter of months. Additionally, rodents may gnaw on electrical wiring, causing equipment malfunction, power outages, and potentially dangerous short circuits.

Droppings, tracks, burrows, pathways, and fresh gnawings, including rodent-damaged feed sacks, indicate areas where rodents are active. Around swine facilities, insulated walls and ceilings are common nesting locations for rodents, especially mice.

Effective control involves sanitation, rodent-proof construction, and population reduction. Reduction techniques include trapping, poisoning, and fumigation.

Food Safety and Pork

Food safety is an issue that has become increasingly prominent. A safe food supply has been expected by consumers and delivered by the industry for many years. However, an increasing awareness of the potential for safety problems arising from changes in production practices and processing techniques has made consumers more determined that safety must be guaranteed.

Public confidence in the safety of pork consumption is high, but a greater awareness of chemical, microbiological, and drug/antibiotic problems has made public confidence very susceptible to change. One news headline reporting an incident involving unsafe pork products could seriously damage consumer perceptions of pork quality and lead to decreased consumption and demand.

Most of the safety concerns in the past have been centered on pathogenic microorganisms, because meat provides a very good environment for microbiological growth. Safety concerns about chemical compounds used in pork products for processing and presentation, particularly sodium, nitrate, and antioxidants such as BHA and BHT, have been raised as issues.

While chemical and microbiological safety are determined largely by the packer and processor, the more recent focus on antibiotic and drug residues in meat is the primary responsibility of producers. All antibiotics and drugs used must be managed carefully to avoid residue problems.

Care and Marketing Of Fleeces

Working at a wool pool and watching wool come in to be graded show that wool is one of the most poorly handled farm products marketed.

Some sheep producers get only half of what their wool should have been worth, because they have marketed fleeces that are full of hay, straw, burrs, manure, mud, or other foreign materials. Fleeces are often tied with everything from baling wire to binder twine. Paper twine is the only acceptable product for tying fleeces.

When you shear sheep and handle fleeces, follow these important procedures:

- Shear only when the wool is dry.
- Clean the straw off the belly and legs before starting to shear.
- Shear on a clean, dry surface. A piece of old carpeting or a piece of plywood works well.
- Avoid second cuts; remove the fleece in one piece.
- Remove all tags, dung locks, and stained wool from the fleece, and bag them separately.
- If there is a lot of hay, chaff, or other material in the neck area, remove this section of the fleece and bag it separately.
- Bag separately black fleeces or fleeces with a large amount of black in them. Remove black leg and face wool from the fleece and bag with black fleece wool.
- Roll fleece with the flesh side out and tie securely, but not too tightly, into a neat package.
- Tie fleeces with paper twine only.
- Tie fleeces separately. Do not tie several together.
- Be sure fleeces are not contaminated with black plastic. This has become a very serious problem — in fact, serious enough that several wool manufacturers have instructed their buyers to reject any wool that shows signs of being contaminated with plastic twine particles.
- Store the tied fleeces in a wool bag in a clean, dry area that is protected from dust, dirt, and rodents. Do not store in plastic bags (the kind used for garbage or lawn clippings) or paper bags.

If you live in an area that holds a wool pool, it may be to your advantage to market through the pool. At least check present wool prices before you sell to local buyers, so you will have an idea what your wool is worth.

Feeding the Stud Ram

Even though very little research work has been done on the nutrition of the stud ram, some general recommendations can be made.

The stud ram, like the brood ewe, requires adequate nutrition in order to perform efficiently. Poor nutrition can result in lowered fertility or even infertility, as well as loss of vigor and strength. For best results, the ram should be in moderate condition at breeding time.

In the summer and just before the breeding season, the ram can receive all of his nutrient requirements from pasture. If the ram begins to lose weight during the breeding season or if he is thin before the breeding season, he should receive from 1 to 1-1/2 pounds per day of shelled corn or a concentrate mixture similar to that recommended for ewes. If a ram lamb is being used, he should be fed more than this amount.

During the winter months, feed the ram so that he gains some weight but does not become excessively fat. One and a half pounds of a concentrate mixture and 3-1/2 pounds of legume or mixed hay per day should be enough for a 200-pound ram. Feed a 265-pound ram the same level of concentrate and 4 pounds of hay per day. When silage is fed, substitute 2 to 3 pounds of silage for each pound of hay replaced.

Care of the Foaling Mare

Birth of young is a critical time for the survival, health, and future breeding productivity of all animals.

Horses are certainly no exception. In their ancestral desert home, the environment and nomadic existence of the horse prevented exposure to infections and parasites which plague horses under modern husbandry.

Preparation for successful foaling of a healthy foal and a healthy mare should begin when the mare is bred. Regular daily exercise, good nutrition, and a parasite control program are necessary to have the mare in fit condition for foaling.

Excessive fat almost guarantees problems at foaling time. Mares and all other female animals approaching parturition (birth of young) should be gaining in condition during the last six weeks of pregnancy, but they should not be fat at parturition.

Never cut down a mare's feed during this period; ketosis and pregnancy toxemia are sure to follow. The foaling mare should be in good flesh, not fat, and alert and active with a good appetite. A mare in that condition is in condition to withstand the critical time of stress ahead.

The normal gestation period for the foal is 315 to 350 days. A live healthy foal born within this period or even before or after this period may still be considered normal. It is not impossible but it is very rare that mares will come back in heat and accept service when they are already pregnant.

There are two ideal places for mares to foal: a clean pasture or a clean box stall. Ideally, a paddock close to the farm home where the mare will have adequate grass, shade, cool water, and privacy from other horses and animals is the best place for foaling after the middle of May in Pennsylvania.

A maternity stall should be at least 14 feet x14 feet with ventilation to the floor on at least one side. Before the mare is put into the maternity stall, the stall should be thoroughly cleaned, washed down with a sanitizer detergent, and left empty of bedding and any other animals until just before the mare is put into the stall. The best material for bedding in the maternity stall is clean bright straw. Shavings and sawdust are less desirable.

Pasture for Horses

Pasture is not an absolute necessity for horse production. However, if properly managed, it does provide an excellent source of quality feed and may result in lower feed costs.

Pasture is the natural feed for horses. No one feed is as nutritionally complete as green pasture grown on fertile soils, and few feeds are fed in a more healthful environment.

The nutritional value of pasture depends upon the amount of forage available, the maturity of the forage, and the type of forage. As forage in the pasture matures, it increases in fiber, and its nutritional value declines appreciably, making it necessary to supply grain and/or protein supplement to the diet. Hard working horses need supplemental energy feeds because of the high water content of grass. Dry grass is usually low in protein and vitamins.

Heavy stocking rates may pose a parasite problem. Use a rotational grazing program, if possible, to break up the life cycle of the parasite. Pastures should be clipped regularly to control weeds and to expose the parsite larvae to the killing environmental forces.

Clipping also promotes new lush growth. Let cattle or sheep graze pasture formerly grazed by horses. They are not affected by the same parasites, and thus the parasite life cycle may be broken. Using a chain harrow or a section of chain link fence will help scatter droppings and expose larvae to sunlight. If possible, use a parasite-free pasture for young horses, as they are more susceptible to parasites than older horses.

E-Z Dumper

TURN YOUR PICKUP INTO A DUMP TRUCK IN LESS THAN ONE HOUR.

E-Z Dumper is the original hydraulically operated dump unit for pickup trucks. With E-Z Dumper you can unload your pickup truck bed in under thirty seconds with the turn of a key. You'll never have to unload your truck by hand again!

The E-Z Dumper can hold and unload up to 4,000 lbs. or two cubic yards of firewood, topsoil, gravel, mulch, grain, or whatever, depending on the weight-carrying capacity of your truck.

Easy To Install And Operate. Do-it-yourself installation of E-Z Dumper is a breeze. No alterations are needed for most trucks. Just slide the dumper into your truckbed, secure it with bolts and holes already on your truck, and you're ready to go. We even include the hydraulic fluid!

A Durable Investment. E-Z Dumper is designed to take a beating from the toughest loads, from two yards of cordwood to two tons of crushed stone, while providing you with years of reliable service.

Need For Poultry Husbandry Important

Herbert C. Jordan
Associate Professor
Poultry Science
Penn State

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Careful husbandry can reduce pollution from poultry manure and/or litter incorporated into soil.

Consider one or more of the following to reduce excess nitrogen, phosphorus, salts, or potash, as well as other compounds in the soil.

• Control or reduce excess molt of feathers from birds. Feathers in manure and/or litter may decompose as nitrogen in the soil when incorporated before sundown the day of spreading. Feathers can be hydrolized and converted into a feed ingredient for a protein source so therefore may give nitrogen to the soil upon decomposition. This needs further testing.

• Prevent feed waste from feeders into manure or litter. Some farms appear to waste one to 10 percent or more of all feed purchased into the manure and/or litter. Feed has plenty of nitrogen, phosphorus, potassium, and salts in it. Feed can behave in the soil as fertilizer, so if it is wasted in manure and/or litter it may add to pollution of soil or water as well as cause loss of net income.

• Prevent mice, rats, and insects from reproducing or living in manure and/or litter. Waste material from these species, dead animals, larvae or pupae, or adult insects can increase nitrogen or other mineral nutrients of the soil when incorporated. This needs more field testing to determine the value or harm of the chemistry of manure in the soil.

• Urates from kidneys of birds are high in nitrogen and usually adhere or stick to the manure, whereas urine from mammals is liquid and may remain near the barn and not accompany manure to the field. Poultry manure is usually perceived to be higher in nitrogen than manure and/or litter from mammals. Part of the reason for this is that nitrogen-rich urates adhere to manure in a normal bird dropping.

• Eggs from cage layers drop through cage floors into manure when the eggshell fails. In flocks where an eggshell problem exists, two dozen or more eggs per layer, on the average, may fall through cage floors to become part of manure which can represent 1-2 percent of the manure on a dry weight basis. Egg protein can add nitrogen to soil when incorporated. Raw egg albumen, if in excess, can plug up a drain field. Eggshell damage problems should be avoided through purchase of a valuable strain of layer, then caring for its environment, nutrition, health, and behavior to keep eggshell damage at or near zero.

• Dust or particulate matter in a poultry house has been found to contain a significantly high quantity of feather or dander-like material. Excess dust can be vacuumed off the walls of a poultry house or kept to a minimum by keeping birds healthy, behaving normally, and not fighting or trying to fly or stampede.

• Chemical agents placed in litter and/or manure for control of odor, toxic gas production, flies, destructive insects, rodents or microbes should be approved by the crop or field supervisor or agronomist. Chemicals added to manure and/or litter may pollute when incorporated into the soil.

• Grit (insoluble or calcium) may destroy knives, pumps, or valves if manure and/or litter is pumped or used in a methane or bio-gas generator.

• Debris, such as garbage, sweepings, tools, equipment parts, filler flats, cracked eggs, dead birds, and body fluids, may cause pollution in soil to increase or decrease depending on what the debris is. Some debris may not affect soil pollution.

• Bedding for litter may or may not worsen pollution. A chopped straw bedding may actually compost and improve soils. A wood by-product bedding may extract nitrogen from soils when it decomposes, making less nitrogen available to crops.

In summary:

• Some soil testing and manure testing labs report poultry manure is getting more concentrated in N, P, K and salts on a dry weight basis over the last 30 years while other laboratory reports disagree.

• Failure to have percent moisture of manure reported along with nitrogen, phosphorus, potash, and salts is confusing the situation. All quantities, qualities, and weights should be reported on a dry weight basis.

• When submitting a soil sample, consider requesting that a total soluble salts be tested through conductivity, which will be reported as millimhos/cm. If the result is above 40, ask your agronomist about it.

• If bird bowel is kept normal and manure is produced in a stool form, it can be aerated, dried, or composted to maintain quality of manure for sale. If this does not happen, manure can cost each farm many thousands of dollars annually.

Early Season Seedling Emergence Aids Profitability

DEKALB, Ill. — Fundamental early season corn seedling management usually produces a profitable crop. DEKALB regional agronomist Jim Schwartz said proper soil nutrition is the key management factor. Precise fertilizer placement can get seedlings off to a good start.

"Small seedlings at the two-leaf stage have only a primary root system so early season nutrient uptake is limited," he said. "Therefore, it's important to keep the fertilizer and other nutrients closer to the root system. That will increase the chance of having a healthier seedling."

Schwartz adds that growers should select hybrids that germinate quickly to avoid any early plant or insect dilemmas.

"When you select hybrids, select ones that will be able to withstand the conditions of a particular area," he said. "If diseases are a problem, choose hybrids that resist those in your area. If cold or compacted soils are a problem, select a hybrid with a very strong emergence and vigor."

To ward off seed rot, decay and insects such as seed corn beetles, seed corn maggots and wireworms before plant emergence, Schwartz recommends using planter-box seed treatments. He said most root-worm insecticides protect against these seed-attackers.

Schwartz advises examining each field for plant population after emergence.

"Counts should be made to determine total emergence as well as uniformity," he said. "It is normal for 10 to 15 percent of the planted seed to fail to germinate, but if that rate exceeds 15 percent, the reasons should be determined."

Conference Encourages Wood Crops

NEBRASKA CITY, Neb. — How farmers can benefit from growing wood as a crop for energy will be a featured topic during a conference sponsored by The National Arbor Day Foundation to promote trees as an alternative to fossil fuels.

The First National Fuelwood Conference is scheduled for November 11-13 in Lincoln, Neb. and farm interests are being encouraged to attend.

According to James R. Fazio, director of the Foundation's Arbor Day Institute, the agricultural community plays a key role in America's energy future.

"Depending on which experts you listen to, woody biomass has the potential of providing roughly 20 to 30 percent of the energy consumed in the United States, instead of the current 4 percent. Half of this could come from woody, short-rotation crops," he said.

Estimates by Department of Energy researchers show that approximately 75-100 million acres of cropland could be committed to fuelwood production without significantly cutting into production of agricultural commodities. These acreages could more than double if all economically marginal or environmentally sensitive crop and pasture lands were included.

In announcing the upcoming conference, Fazio cited one study that shows that under many conditions, farmers could make more money by growing trees. This, in turn, could help free the nation from its dependency on oil and other fossil fuels.

"Potentially, trees grown for energy offer this nation a win-win alternative to the current path we are on of putting just about all our eggs in the fossil fuel basket," said Fazio. He said reasons fall into two categories, the first of which is environmental.

"Through our dependency on oil and coal, we know we will be pumping more and more carbon dioxide and sulphur dioxide into the atmosphere. This contributes to air pollution (acid rain) that is believed to be weakening downwind forests, possibly poisoning the soil, and adding gases that are major villains in global warming threats," he said.

Renewable biomass energy crops not only reduce the need for fossil fuels, they provide a fuel with no sulphur dioxide and they remove large quantities of carbon from the atmosphere as they grow.

"The other reason is more personal," said Fazio. Wood energy crops will provide direct benefits to farmers and rural economies. His list of benefits includes producing a crop that requires less tillage and fewer chemical additives; reduces soil loss; buffers local streams from chemical runoff; adds new advantages to growing windbreaks; offers fast returns where markets are in place but does not tie up land or investments as long as traditional forest crops; provides self-sufficiency for home heating; and can make entire regions energy self-sufficient.

The National Wood Energy Association, another cosponsor of the conference, reports that technologies are now available to allow the efficient, clean burning of wood for the generation of electricity or heat.

The association says that the obstacles to broader adoption are more social and economic than technical. Some experts foresee the economic and environmental advantages tipping in favor of much greater biomass production and use in the next decade.

The First National Fuelwood Conference will explore these and other issues and provide a roundup of state-of-the-art information about growing, harvesting, and burning trees for energy. The emphasis is on the practical and "how-to," including a session called "The Chicken and Egg Quandary" that will discuss how markets for fuelwood can be created so that landowners can have outlets for fuelwood where none currently exist. Conference organizers say that their goal is to help stimulate grassroots commercialization of the technology already produced by research and currently used by a relatively small number of innovators.

New Interest Assistance From FmHA

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Farmers Home Administration is launching a new program to help local farmers obtain credit from local lenders, according to D. Eugene Gayman, FmHA state director for Pennsylvania.

Known as the Interest Assistance Program, it provides strong incentives for commercial lenders to make loans to farmers who otherwise would not qualify.

Under the new program, FmHA will pay up to 4 percentage points of interest for farmers to help them qualify for FmHA guaranteed loans. "If a creditworthy farmer cannot cash flow with a guaranteed bank loan at regular interest rates, we can pay part of that interest for him until he can," Gayman said.

The percentage of interest FmHA will pay depends on the financial condition of the farmer. FmHA will pay only the number of points necessary to help the farmer's cash flow with a small reserve.

An FmHA guaranteed loan is made by a bank, PCA, or other lender with an agreement from FmHA that if the loan goes bad, FmHA will compensate the lender for up to 90 percent of its loss. "That guarantee, plus the new interest assistance," Gayman said, "should greatly increase availability of farm credit through the private sector.

"The program, made law in late 1990, was put on a fast track, so as to assist farmers in time for the 1991 planting season," Gayman added.

According to Gayman, the level of interest assistance will be adjusted each year, based on a review of the borrower's need for continued assistance. In addition, a borrower must be able to project a positive cash flow, including a 10 percent debt-service reserve to qualify for assistance. This is the same rule for guaranteed farm loans not receiving interest assistance.

Additional details about the Interest Assistance Program can be obtained from any Farmers Home Administration (FmHA) county or district office, or from the FmHA state office at One Credit Union Place, Suite 330, Harrisburg, PA 17110-2996.

1991 Machinery Custom Rates

DAVID KNOPF
Agricultural Statistician

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The custom rates shown are averages from voluntary reports by custom operators throughout Pennsylvania. Most of the rates are stated per acre, cwt., ton, bale, or bushel rather than per hour to reduce the variation due to machinery size. Individual rates vary due to differences in working conditions, services performed, or even the operator's eagerness to do custom work. Therefore, the average rates shown should not be considered absolute indications of fair chargers.

Acreage rates are shown separately for two regions of the state, labeled "Mountain" and "Valley". The differences in rates between regions reflect differences in terrain, soils and alternative opportunities for the labor and equipment used. Figures labeled "The State" represent the straight average of all reports used regardless of geographic location.

Most custom rates are higher this year. Of the 65 rates reported, 87 percent have increased, 8 percent have decreased, and the remaining 5 percent are the same as last year. The overall average is up 5 percent from the previous year. This percentage increase was computed by adding the rates for all jobs, regardless of basis of charge, and dividing by last year's comparable total.

A.P.R. Financing

We're happy to announce...nothing. Nothing in finance charges. And nothing in payments for 81-105 days depending on your date of purchase.

It's our 0.0% A.P.R. Financing Offer for Farm Plan Preferred Members. And it's available for any single invoice totaling $500 or more purchased with Farm Plan credit. (Multiple item purchases qualify for 0.0% financing* as long as the invoice is more than $500.)

So ask us about interest-free financing. If you're not presently a Farm Plan Preferred Member, stop by and fill out an application. After all, this offer of nothing is really something!

* All interest free purchases must be paid in full on the third statement following purchase. Otherwise, interest will begin to accrue at the Preferred Member rate of 16.75% A.P.R. Preferred Member A.P.R. may be lower in some states.

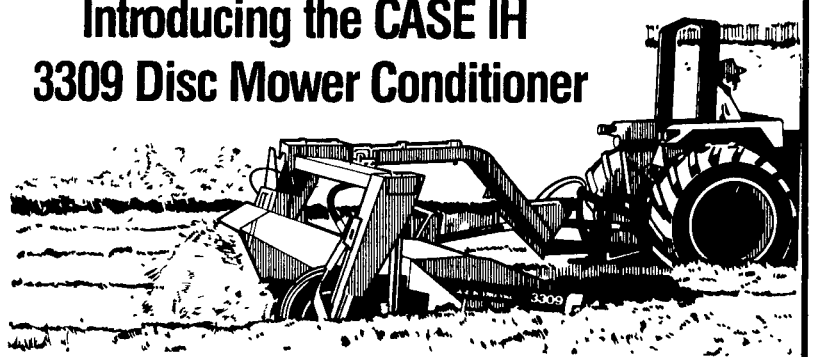
Fast cutting in the toughest field conditions.

Introducing the CASE IH 3309 Disc Mower Conditioner



Whether your hay crops are nearly ideal or difficult cutting conditions are the norm the CASE International 3309 Disc Mower Conditioner delivers fast cutting with less plugging Seven oval discs spinning at 3 000 RPM — with two free-swinging, reversible knives apiece — slice through tangled grass hay or legumes easily and efficiently with a cut that s 9 ft 3 in (2 82 m) wide The patented roll separation lets you clear out slugs without leaving the tractor seat and the adjustable header tilt and hydraulic tongue positioning offer extra operator convenience And you ll find many more features to help you match crop conditions A direct-drive gearbox and modular cutterbar assure reduced maintenance and provide for ease of servicing For virtually nonstop cutting when the going gets tough get going — and keep going — with a CASE International 3309 See it today

Service and maintenance were equally well planned for on the 3309. A constatn-velocity PTO allows smooth, quiet turns, as well as less wear on bearings and drivelines. In addition, you'll find a single direct-drive gear box that drives all the working components on the machine, including both conditioner rolls and the cutterbar Each knife is reversible, with two cutting edges for extended usage Finally, the shaft-driven cutterbar is built with modular components for easy repair and reduced maintenance Instead of disassembling the entire bar, you can simply remove the appropriate disc module, make the needed repairs, and you're back in the field

With Case IH You Have Grease Lubrication - NOT Oil Bath With Seals To Give-Out Like The Competition Offers... Also, With Individualized Case IH Components You Need Not Worry When Working On Slopes On Account Of Oil Lube Running To End Of Cutter Bar & Running Dry On Other End.

NOW TAKING ORDERS!

New! Precision Metering For Soybeans, Milo.

Imagine nearly perfect plateless metering for soybeans, milo/grain sorghum! Imagine the ability to plant varying seed sizes accurately — soybeans (from 2,200 to 4,000 seeds per pound); milo/grain sorghum (12,000-18,000 seeds per pound); — with the same meter and the appropriate seed disc. A precision meter with one moving part. One that costs little to maintain. One that eliminates the wasted overage and all the extra adjustments of conventional mechanical metering systems. One that doesn't require all the pumps, adjustments and maintenance of air and vacuum systems. One that's actually gentler on the seed than anything you've used before.

Meet the new KINZE® Brush-Type Seed Meter. Designed specifically to handle a wide variety of crops.

How does it work? Simply! It consists of a die-cast aluminum housing and a system of brushes that fills and gently retains individual seeds in a precision-molded seed disc with specially designed seed pockets.

As the disc rotates vertically within the housing, seeds gravitate toward the pedrimeter of the seed disc. Individual seeds are then picked up by the molded seed pocket and retained by the special brush system until they reach a point immediately above the seed tube where they are released and allowed to drop gently into the seed trench.

The result? More accuracy and control than you ever thought possible. Without all the adjustments. Without all the maintenance headaches.

Simple. Precise Reliable. Economical. The KINZE Finger Pickup Corn Meter.

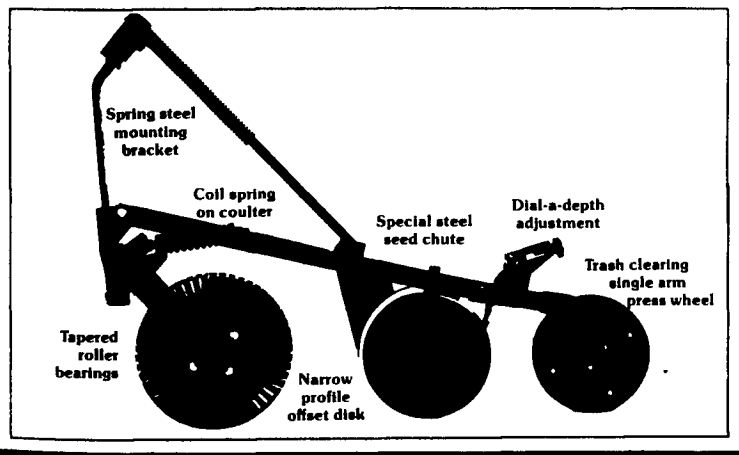
You Won't Find A Better No-Till Drill Than GREAT PLAINS



Great Plains Solid Stand no-till drills have the planting accuracy drilled soybeans need;
(1) Depth-Gauging Press Wheels keep the opener from penetrating too deep; planting depth can be quickly changed with exclusive dial-a-depth adjustment system.
(2) The spring-loaded coulters offer up to 400 lbs. per row of down-pressure, ensuring that they open a groove in even the toughest residue and soil. Each coulter is integrated with its opener and press wheel arm so that coulters and openers are close enough for good tracking but separated to allow good trash flow.
(3) A spring steel mounting bar allows the entire planting system to flex with the terrain, for even more flexibility for the coulter and opener assembly.
(4) The double-disk openers and coulters flex independently to pass over stones easily. A sturdy down-pressure spring with 56 lbs. of pressure per inch holds the opener firmly in the groove.

THE NO-TILL DRILL THAT WORKS

Here's why:
The end wheel-opener alignment means that the openers neither gouge the soil nor leave the ground when traversing rolling ground; they simply follow the terrain right with the end wheels. The end wheels also act as stabilizers to hold the openers steady when seeding on slopes. By keeping the ground-working components well protected within the profile of the end wheels, the operating costs are low on our Solid Stand No-Till Drill.

Their versatility, their residue clearance, and their compact design make these drills a natural choice. Their narrow widths make them perfect for narrow roads and gates.

Even with all these outstanding no-till capabilities, these drills are well-suited to conventional seeding as well. And of course they have the same great opener and press wheel system offered by all Great Plains Solid Stand drills.

TORQUE AMPLIFIERS & CLUTCHES

★ New Wider Heavy Duty Super Sprag 1-1/32" Wide
★ 5 Yr. Warranty Against Sprag Failure
★ Introductory Price $695.00

We are pleased to announce a major improvement in TA strength & performance backed up by a warranty that is unmatched in the industry The 5/8" width Dana sprag which we have used over the past 10 years has proven its ability to perform under the most adverse of conditions and has achieved results that have sent our competitors scrambling to keep up. By increasing the width of the sprag to 1-1/32" and caging it in a heavier frame, we now have an unmatched shock load capacity and dramatically raised our load carrying ability Our studies have shown that 90% of TA problems are directly related to sprag failure We feel that we now have the strongest sprag & best rebuilt TA available and it will be warranted as follows:

*5 yr - 100% parts & labor against sprag
*2 ry - 100% parts & labor on remainder of unit

Our standard heavy duty TA is still available at $645.00 and carles a *2 yr. - 100% parts & labor warranty.

* Certain restrictions apply and there will be a maximum labor pay-out of $450 00
We also have units & parts available to rebuild old style TA's, including ramp & carrier sets
NEW price on ramps & carriers - $200 00

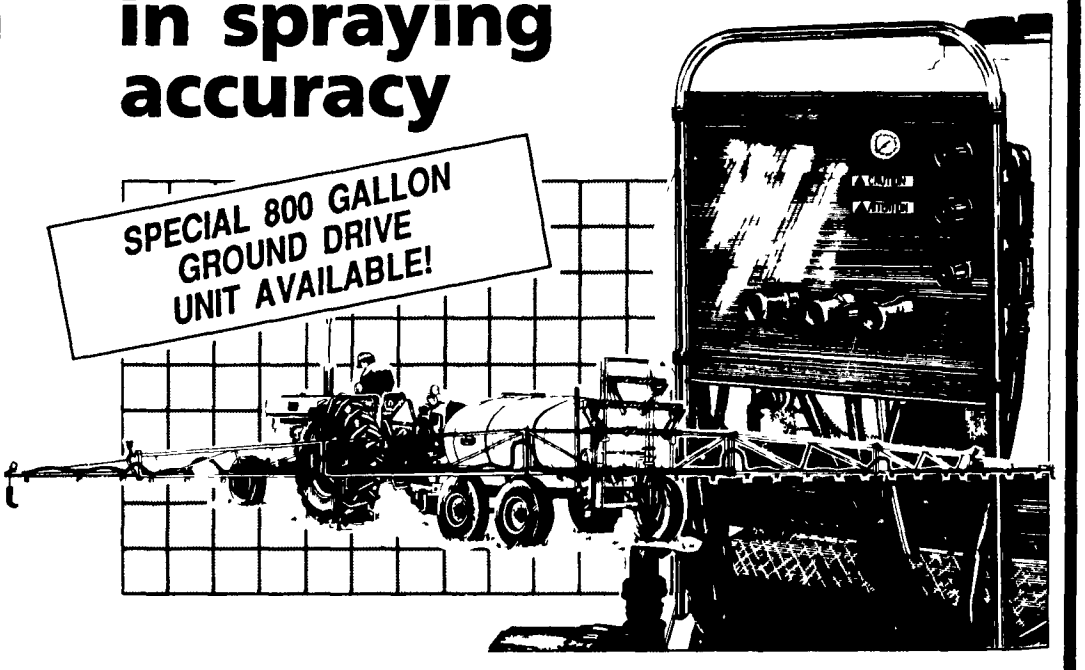
Breakthrough in spraying accuracy

SPECIAL 800 GALLON GROUND DRIVE UNIT AVAILABLE!



Wasting chemical and yield on hills and headlands is a thing of the past with Vicon's new flow proportioning and boom compensation system. Application rate remains constant even when ground speed varies or individual boom sections are shut off. That means better coverage with lower input costs.

It is available on all Vicon trailer sprayers with tank capacities up to 785 U.S. gal. (3000 litres) and automatic stabilizing booms from 28' to 62'. There's also a choice of hydraulic or manual folding booms and a range of accessories that make crop spraying less of a chore.

"MAKING GOOD SILAGE"

Probably no other ingredient fed in cattle rations today varies so much in "quality" as silage. It takes common sense, attention to details, and solid management to make good silage.

At least nine factors affect silage quality. Rather than acting independently, they interact to determine silage quality:

"The 9 Factors"

1. The Crop
2. Stage of Growth
3. Moisture
4. Fine Chopping
5. Filling, Packing and Sealing
6. Silo Structures
7. Feedout
8. Weather
9. Additives

Since 1908, SOLLENBERGER SILOS CORP. has been providing the Silo Structures now in demand by more and more farmers concerned about "silage quality." "Nothing keeps feed better than our poured concrete silos."

• Large Tri-Suspension frame provides proper balance for even silage cutting.
• 2"x2"x¼" angled steel frame has greater strength
• Forged ½" steel eye-bolts allow for individual cable adjustment and proper balance.
• Three, strong, ¼" aircraft-type cables provide high-tensile strength and dependability.

• Auger knives are sharpened, hardened and curved. Result: augers and chipper wheels maintain proper wall pressure for better cleaning and more aggressive cutting and digging of hard-packed or frozen silage.
